The Great Perspectivists Gavin Stamp, Royal Institute of British Architects, 1982      The Great Perspectivists Gavin Stamp, Royal Institute of British Architects, 1982      Man-Made Future Iain Boyd Whyte, 2006-12-19 This anthology of essays by a group of distinguished scholars investigates post 1945 city planning in Britain not from a technical viewpoint but as a polemical visual and educational phenomenon shifting the focus of scholarly interest towards the often neglected emotional and aesthetic aspects of post war planning. Each essay is grounded in original archival research and sheds new light on this critical era in the development of modern town planning. This collection is a valuable resource for architectural, social and urban historians as well as students and researchers offering new insights into the development of the mid-twentieth century city.

Scientific Perspectivism Ronald N. Giere, 2024-05-31 Many people assume that the claims of scientists are objective truths. But historians, sociologists, and philosophers of science have long argued that scientific claims reflect the particular historical, cultural, and social context in which those claims were made. The nature of scientific knowledge is not absolute because it is influenced by the practice and perspective of human agents. Scientific Perspectivism argues that the acts of observing and theorizing are both perspectival and this nature makes scientific knowledge contingent as Thomas Kuhn theorized forty years ago. Using the example of color vision in humans to illustrate how his theory of perspectivism works, Ronald N. Giere argues that colors do not actually exist in objects; rather, color is the result of an interaction between aspects of the world and the human visual system. Giere extends this argument into a general interpretation of human perception and more controversially to scientific observation, conjecturing that the output of scientific instruments is perspectival. Furthermore, complex scientific principles such as Maxwell's equations describing the behavior of both the electric and magnetic fields make no claims about the world but models based on those principles can be used to make claims about specific aspects of the world. Offering a solution to the most contentious debate in the philosophy of science over the past thirty years, Scientific Perspectivism will be of interest to anyone involved in the study of science.

Shaping the Surface Stephen Kite, 2022-11-17 Shaping the Surface explores the history of modern British architecture through the lens of surface materiality and decoration. Picking up on a trait that art historian Nikolaus Pevsner first identified as a national mania for beautiful surface quality, this book makes a new contribution to architectural history and visual culture in its detailed examination of the surfaces of British architecture from the middle of the 19th century up to the turn of the 21st century. Tracing this continuing sensibility to surface all the way through to the modern era, it explores how and why surface and materiality have featured so heavily in recent architectural tradition, examining the history of British architecture through a selection of key cultural moments and movements from Romanticism and the Arts and Crafts to Brutalism, High Tech, Post Modernism, Neo Vernacular, and the New Materiality. Embedded within the narrative is the question of whether such national characters can exist in architecture at all and indeed the extent to which it is possible to identify a British architectural consciousness in an architectural tradition characterised by its continuous importation of theories ideas materials and people from around the globe Shaping the Surface provides a deep critique and meditation on the importance of surface and materiality for architects designers and historians everywhere in Britain and beyond while it also serves as a thematic introduction to modern British architectural history with in depth readings of the works of many key British architects artists and critics from Ruskin and William Morris to Alison and Peter Smithson Eduardo Paolozzi Richard Rogers and Caruso St John

The Poetics of Historical Perspectivism Jill Anne Kowalik, 1992 Jill Kowalik reevaluates J J Breitinger's Critische Dichtkunst 1740 with regard to a heretofore neglected aspect of aesthetics in the early eighteenth century namely how poesis and historiography could increasingly come to resemble each other in their assumptions purposes and methods of representation The central argument states that historians of this period began to utilize the concept of historical perspectivism only after its development as an interpretive tool by the aesthetic thinkers of the early Enlightenment The Critische Dichtkunst is examined in terms of three disparate traditions the modern reception of Aristotle's Poetics Horace's Ars poetica and the Quarrel between the Ancients and the Moderns the model of consciousness proposed by Leibniz that describes the mind as a ceaseless process of historical intellective integration and the German reception of French neoclassical authors especially Dubos whose notion of historical probability was radicalized by Breitinger and later appropriated by poets and historians alike
