- Site-silence protocol (this assumes a low level of control of circulation or food availability) involves not feeding a designated 10% of the colony.
- Controlled-pairing system is based on a 1:1 matching system between first experience and first pairing, resulting in a 1:1 ratio across all years.
- Controlled pairing (this approach is used in most experiments)
- Controlled pairing with adjustment (this ensures you have control over the proportion of pairs you intend to establish prior to the experiment, but you still control, to a degree, the number of pairs that actually establish, or which do result in pups or the sex of the pups)
- Controlled pairing with adjustment and adjustment (this ensures you have control over the number of pairs that establish, but you also have control over the sex of the pups)
- Controlled pairing with adjustment and adjustment (this ensures you have control over the number of pairs that establish, but you also have control over the sex of the pups)

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 15 women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or pulmonary disease. The subjects were randomly assigned to a 10-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise at 60% of the maximum heart rate (HR<sub>max</sub>) for 30 minutes. The control group did not exercise. The HR and EE were measured at rest and during exercise at the beginning and end of the 10-week period. The HR<sub>max</sub> was determined by a maximal exercise test. The HR and EE were measured at rest and during exercise at the beginning and end of the 10-week period. The HR and EE were significantly higher at the end of the 10-week period compared to the beginning of the 10-week period in the training group. The HR and EE were not significantly different between the training and control groups at the beginning and end of the 10-week period. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.

- The wall-mount installation is no longer "the standard"
  - demands more wall strength with the addition of an extra support structure, known as a wall-mount reinforcement plate, to ensure that the wall-mount can support the weight of the device over its lifetime.
- The wall-mounts themselves are no longer "off-the-shelf"
  - standard two-way specifications, the design of the device may differ depending on the wall-mount type specifications.
- The wall-mounts have many form factors. They may damage the product or reduce the product's life, leading to the general advice: "to ensure most damage to these devices of any kind, the best, fastest, easiest procedure is to throw them away."
- The wall-mounts may be made of metal, but are not necessarily the "correct" metal.
  - The wall-mounts may be made of a metal that is not compatible with the product's metal.

Shouldn't someone eventually know how to do this?
