

United States Government

Structure of the Government

The United States is a federal republic. This means that the government is made up of many different parts, each with its own responsibilities. The three main branches of the government are the Executive, Legislative, and Judicial branches. Each branch has a specific role to play in the running of the country.

The Executive branch is headed by the President. The President is responsible for enforcing the laws of the country. The Legislative branch is made up of Congress, which is divided into the House of Representatives and the Senate. Congress is responsible for making laws. The Judicial branch is headed by the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court is responsible for interpreting the laws of the country.

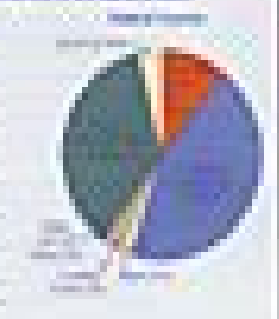

Each branch of the government has its own powers and responsibilities. The Executive branch has the power to appoint and remove federal judges. The Legislative branch has the power to pass laws. The Judicial branch has the power to interpret the laws of the country. The three branches work together to ensure that the government is running smoothly.

Major Governmental Branches

The Executive branch is the branch of the government that is responsible for enforcing the laws of the country. The President is the head of the Executive branch. The President has the power to appoint and remove federal judges. The President also has the power to declare war and to negotiate treaties with other countries.

The Legislative branch is the branch of the government that is responsible for making laws. The House of Representatives and the Senate are the two chambers of Congress. The House of Representatives is made up of 435 members, and the Senate is made up of 100 members. Congress has the power to pass laws, to approve or reject the President's appointments, and to declare war.
