Southern Writer In The Postmodern World:

The Southern Writer in the Postmodern World Fred C. Hobson, 1991 In The Southern Writer in the Postmodern World Fred Hobson offers a witty and engaging preliminary estimate of some of the most prominent new figures in southern fiction. Although he discovers no shortage of talent, he does find various and conflicting attitudes toward the south and the contemporary world. Especially concerned with the relationship of these new writers to their literary predecessors, he traces the continuity or lack of continuity of certain attitudes, fictional approaches, and even values that informed southern writing during its earlier flowering in the 1920s, 1930s, and 1940s. Keywords for Southern Studies

Scott Romine, Jennifer Rae Greeson, 2016-08-15 In Keywords for Southern Studies editors Scott Romine and Jennifer Rae Greeson have compiled an eclectic collection of new essays that address the fluidity of southern studies by adopting a transnational interdisciplinary focus. The essays are structured around critical terms pertinent both to the field and to modern life in general. The nonbinary nontraditional approach of Keywords unmasks and refutes standard binary thinking. First World Third World self/other, for instance, that postcolonial studies revealed as a flawed rhetorical structure for analyzing empire. Instead, Keywords promotes a holistic way of thinking that begins with southern studies but extends beyond.

The Postsouthern Sense of Place in Contemporary Fiction Martyn Bone, 2005-06-01 For generations southern novelists and critics have grappled with a concept that is widely seen as a trademark of their literature: a strong attachment to geography or a sense of place. In the 1930s the Agrarians accorded special meaning to rural life, particularly the farm, in their definitions of southern identity. For them the South seemed an organic and rooted region, in contrast to the North where real estate development and urban sprawl evoked a faceless, raw capitalism. By the end of the twentieth century, however, economic and social forces had converged to create a modernized South. How have writers responded to this phenomenon? Is there still a sense of place in the South, or perhaps a distinctly postsouthern sense of place? Martyn Bone innovatively draws upon postmodern thinking to consider the various perspectives that southern writers have brought to the concept of place and to look at its fate in a national and global context. He begins with a revisionist assessment of the Agrarians, who failed in their attempts to turn their proprietary ideal of the small farm into actual policy, but whose broader rural aesthetic lived on in the work of neo-Agrarian writers including William Faulkner and Eudora Welty. By the 1950s, adherence to this aesthetic was causing southern writers and critics to lose sight of the social reality of a changing South. Bone turns to more recent works that do respond to the impact of capitalist spatial development on the South and on the nation generally, including that self-declared international city Atlanta. Close readings of novels by Robert Penn Warren, Walker Percy, Richard Ford, Anne Rivers Siddons, Tom Wolfe, and Toni Cade Bambara illuminate evolving ideas about capital, land, labor, and class while introducing southern literary studies into wider debates around social, cultural, and literary geography. Bone concludes his remarkably rich book by considering works of Harry Crews and Barbara Kingsolver that suggest the southern sense of place may be not only post Agrarian or postsouthern but also transnational Goth Michael Bibby, Lauren M. E.
