The House In Dormer Forest:

The House in Dormer Forest Mary Webb, 2021-12-14 The House in Dormer Forest is a 1920 romance novel by the British writer Mary Webb. It was part of a wave of regional novels set across Britain in Webb's case in her native Shropshire. She wrote it while living at her home near Bayston Hill. The House in Dormer Forest Mary Webb, 1935 The House in Dormer Forest Gladys Mary WEBB, 1920 The House in Dormer Forest Mary Webb, Mary, 2018-01-17 This is a short and intrinsically simple story about a house deep in the Shropshire countryside full of people, some likeable, most not, who hate each other and long to break free. The trouble is none of them can find a way out that isn't yet another form of prison for them. In the end, the more likeable characters choose to defy convention and do escape. The House in Dormer Forest Mary Webb, 2019 The House In Dormer Forest

Mary Webb, 2020-05-02 DORMER Old House stood amid the remnants of primeval woodland that curtained the hills. These rose steeply on all sides of the house, which lay low by the water in the valley. This was called Oolert's Dingle, and there were plenty of owls to justify the name. On a moonlit night, passing high up from side to side of the cuplike valley, they looked like breeze-blown feathers. Higher still, on the very rim of the cup, the far-travelled winds shouted across to one another all winter news of the world. When the bats slipped from their purlieus in the cobwebby outbuildings and climbed toward this rim, they had to ascend step after grey step of the windless air and only attained their ambition after long flying From these heights in fine weather the house and its gardens lay open to the view small but clear beside the white thread that was Dormer brook The place had been patched and enlarged by successive generations very much as man s ideas are altered the result in both cases being the same a mansion to the majority a prison to the few On clear evenings when the westering sun struck up the valley and set the windows on fire one could see the centuries in the house like ferns in a fossil There was the timbered black and white centre once the complete house with diamond lattices and the unassuming solidity of an Elizabethan manor there was the small Queen Anne wing on the left one room down and two up built by a rich ancestor of the Darke family there was the solemn Georgian porch with its rounded shell like roof and Grecian pillars The right wing hideously stuccoed consisted of one large room with many paned sash windows and a steep red roof and had been built by the father of Solomon Darke the present owner At the back perilously clinging to the Elizabethan farm was an ancient cottage which seemed to be the nucleus of the whole and was built of stone and thatched When the ambitious Elizabethan set about building his manor no doubt the two bottle glass windows of this cottage eyed him reproachfully as a Vandal and a despiser of his ancestors It was neglected now and remained weighed down by the large leaved ivy haunted by its whisper year after year and used only by Enoch the gardener who stored apples there and by the mice who consumed the apples The house as a whole had something of a malignant air as of an old ruler from whom senility takes the power but not the will for tyranny
