

NATURE VS NURTURE

Nature versus nurture is an ongoing debate about the degree to which human behaviour is determined by genetic inheritance (nature) or learned through interactions with the environment (nurture).

NURTURE

Explanations suggesting behaviour is determined by the environment and personal experiences. They believe all human characteristics are a result of social and material environmental factors that influence development from birth onwards.

Petrie, M. (1920) conducted a case study on a child known as 'Little Albert' to see if it was possible to condition a child to fear an innocuous object.

- Little Albert showed no fear response to any stimulus before the experiment.
- Little Albert was presented with a white rat. Each time he reached for it, a loud noise was played (unconditioned stimulus). Albert responded to the rat alone crying and rapidly 'locking' away, which took him to his crying fit.
- The fear had been transferred to other looking objects, including a rabbit and a fur coat.
- One month later, Albert continued to show fear reactions to all similar objects. This provided evidence that the environment can manipulate to create a phobic response and behavioural change.

Zimbardo (1972) conducted the Stanford Prison Experiment to investigate the effects that roles and the environment can have on people's behaviour.

- 24 male volunteers were randomly assigned to the role of "guards" or "guards".
- A simulated prison was built in the basement of the psychology building at Stanford University.
- Guards were given authority, uniforms, batons, whistles and dominantly in the body of control and power.
- As a result, guards beat their roles, their behaviour was extremely aggressive, abusive and used various forms of punishment to control the inmates.
- In contrast, the inmates were given few responsibilities and were extremely kind to each other, despite the guards.
- The experiment had to be stopped after just six days.

The Humanistic Approach – believes that behaviour is influenced by other personal and environmental factors of the world.

The Behaviourist Approach – believes behaviour is learned through a process of conditioning.

The Social Approach – explores how people's behaviour is influenced by other people and culture.

PROBLEMS WITH THE NATURE VS NURTURE DEBATE

1. It is reductionist because it states that behaviour is solely caused by genetic factors or experience.
2. It is deterministic because it suggests behaviour is determined by hereditary factors, while environmental suggest that behaviour is the result of interactions with the environment.
3. It is difficult to control variables. For example, the variables in this study could not be controlled. All influences cannot be isolated.

NATURE

Naturalists argue that behaviour is caused by innate characteristics that are passed down our ancestors and form our genetic make-up. They believe genes play a part with our behaviour because we are programmed from birth, and innate behaviours are generalised to us through our family tree.

Genes and Twins (1980) involved twin and adoption studies to determine whether先天性 or genetic factors are responsible for a genetic link.

Adoption studies found an increased occurrence of schizophrenia in adopted children with schizophrenic parents. Children of schizophrenic parents and adopted parents of schizophrenic children showed little evidence of schizophrenia. This indicates a significant genetic input into the onset of schizophrenia.

Twin studies found a higher concordance rate for schizophrenia in identical twins than non-identical twins. On average, there is a 50% probability that both individuals in a pair will have a certain characteristic, given that one of them has that characteristic. Interestingly, there was a concordance rate of 50% in identical twins, compared to 12% in non-identical twins.

Phenome (1980) found that the overall heritability of IQ is identical and monozygous twins, which indicates that 50% of IQ was influenced by genetics. When only identical twins that had adopted were studied, the heritability rate increased to 0.74, which means there were 74% of variation caused by environmental differences, suggesting that the environment influences IQ.

The Biological Approach – believes behaviour is controlled by the brain, which is influenced by other factors such as hormones, systems.

NATURE AND NURTURE INTERACTION

Psychologists generally agree that behaviour is a result of the interaction between nature and nurture.

Psychologists believe that either nature or nurture can be dominant, but they are part of a system. In fact, they argue, psychology often highlights the interaction between nature and nurture.

Margulis et al. (2000) conducted a study on black swans and found that they were not black because they ate black food.

They found various factors that influenced the colour of the swans. They argue that the environment can influence behaviour directly. Their behaviour (feeding), culture, diet, or repetition can contribute to their environment, which changes their behaviour. For example, after they eat red carrots, they eat more red carrots. Repetition can also happen indirectly as people with high dopamine eat more carrots.

Recent brain scans are showing that people with different genes had different brain structures.

For example, people with schizophrenia are individuals' behaviour with their genes.

The Psychodynamic Approach – looks at unconscious and childhood experiences that can affect behaviour.

The Developmental Approach – explores how people's behaviour changes over time.

The Cognitive Approach – focuses on how people's behaviour is affected by their thoughts and experiences.

Social and Emotional Development in Infancy and Early Childhood Janette B. Benson, Marshall M. Haith, 2010-05-21

Research is increasingly showing the effects of family school and culture on the social emotional and personality development of children. Much of this research concentrates on grade school and above but the most profound effects may occur much earlier in the 0-3 age range. This volume consists of focused articles from the authoritative Encyclopedia of Infant and Early Childhood Development that specifically address this topic and collates research in this area in a way that isn't readily available in the existing literature covering such areas as adoption, attachment, birth order, effects of day care, discipline and compliance, divorce, emotion regulation, family influences, preschool routines, separation anxiety, shyness, socialization effects of television, etc. This one volume reference provides an essential, affordable reference for researchers, graduate students, and clinicians interested in social psychology and personality as well as those involved with cultural psychology and developmental psychology. Presents literature on influences of families, school and culture in one source, saving users time searching for relevant related topics in multiple places and literatures in order to fully understand any one area. Focused content on age 0-3 save time searching for and wading through lit on full age range for developmentally relevant info. Concise, understandable and authoritative for immediate applicability in research. Psychology for VCE Units 1 and 2 9e learnON and Print John Grivas, 2022-12-19

Cross-cultural Perspectives in Introductory

Psychology William F. Price,Richley H. Crapo,2002 By William F Price North Country Community College and Richley H Crapo Utah State University This timely revision contains 26 articles on cultural groups around the globe and is an ideal companion volume to any introductory psychology text Where appropriate in the standard curriculum of the introductory course the authors include a cross cultural reading or vignette that enriches the traditional material of the course The book is designed to increase student understanding of the similarities and differences among the peoples of the world as they relate to psychological principles concepts and issues As topics are covered in the introductory course readings offer another dimension Test Bank for Zimbardo, Weber and Johnson Psychology, Third Edition Thomas Land,2000 Psychology

Third Edition builds upon the experience and reputations of Phil Zimbardo and Ann Weber with the addition of a new co author Bob Johnson who has a wealth of teaching experience at the community college level This briefer less expensive book presents psychology in a meaningful manageable format that focuses on the key questions and core concepts of psychology Introductory psychology covers such a wide range of topics and issues that it becomes difficult for readers to see the forest for the trees To make key psychological concepts more meaningful the authors found inspiration in a classic chess study This study showed that experts did no better than novices at remembering the location of pieces on a chess board when they were placed randomly Only when the patterns represented actual game situations did they make sense and therefore become more easily memorable for the experts Clearly meaningful patterns are easier to remember and understand than random arrangements and Psychology applies this by presenting the field of psychology in meaningful patterns to enhance comprehension These concepts are then applied to readers own lives study skills and the world around them Finally Psychology integrates a cross cultural and multicultural perspective to make psychology meaningful for everyone For anyone interested in Introductory Psychology
