Song Trials:

The Impact of Music on Human Development and Well-Being Michele Biasutti, Graham F. Welch, Jennifer MacRitchie, Gary E. McPherson, Evangelos Himonides, 2020-07-17 Music is one of the most universal ways of expression and communication in human life and is present in the everyday lives of people of all ages and from all cultures around the world. Music represents an enjoyable activity in and of itself but its influence goes beyond simple amusement. Listening to music, singing, playing, composing and improvising individually and collectively are common activities for many people. These activities not only allow the expression of personal inner states and feelings but also can bring many positive effects to those who engage in them. There is an increasing wealth of literature concerning the wider benefits of musical activity and research in the sciences associated with music suggests that there are many dimensions of human life physical, social, psychological including cognitive and emotional which can be affected positively by music. The impact that musical activity has on human life can be found in different processes including a transfer of learning from the musical to another cognitive domain. Abilities that have been developed through music education and training may also be effectively applied in other cognitive tasks. Engagement in successful music activity may also have a positive impact on social skills and social inclusion thus supporting the participation of the individual in collective and collaborative musical events. The promotion of social participation through music can foster many kinds of inclusion including intercultural, intergenerational and support for those who are differently abled. The aim of this Research Topic is to present a diverse range of original articles that investigate and discuss in different ways the crucial role that musical activity can play in human development and well-being.

Fitness

Costs and Benefits of Female Song Michelle L. Hall, Naomi E. Langmore, 2017-09-11 Bird song traditionally regarded as primarily a male trait is in fact widespread among female songbirds and was probably present in the ancestor of modern songbirds. Odom et al 2014 Nature Communications. These recent findings challenge the view that sexual dimorphism in the expression and complexity of song is largely the outcome of sexual selection on males. It is now clear that understanding the evolution of bird song requires explaining variation within and among species in the expression and complexity of female song. To do this we need a better understanding of the nature of variation in female song in different contexts and systems as well as the fitness costs and benefits of variation in the expression and complexity of female song. This Research Topic draws together current research on female song with the goal of understanding the fitness costs and benefits of the diversity of female singing behaviour apparent among songbirds. It includes articles ranging from single species studies investigating how female song varies with context and contrasts with male song to comparative analyses exploring relationships between female song and ecological, social and other factors as well as opinion pieces.

Music, Brain, and Rehabilitation: Emerging Therapeutic Applications and Potential Neural Mechanisms Teppo Särkämö, Eckart Altenmüller, Antoni Rodríguez-Fornells, Isabelle Peretz, 2016-08-05 Music is an important source of enjoyment, learning and well-being in life as well as a rich powerful and versatile stimulus for the brain. With the advance of modern neuroimaging techniques during the past decades we are now beginning to understand better what goes on in the healthy brain when we hear play think and feel music and how the structure and function of the brain can change as a result of musical training and expertise. For more than a century music has also been studied in the field of neurology where the focus has mostly been on musical deficits and symptoms caused by neurological illness e.g. amusia, musicogenic epilepsy or on occupational diseases of professional musicians e.g. focal dystonia, hearing loss. Recently however there has been increasing interest and progress also in adopting music as a therapeutic tool in neurological rehabilitation and many novel music based rehabilitation methods have been developed to facilitate motor, cognitive, emotional and social functioning of infants, children and adults suffering from a debilitating neurological illness or disorder. Traditionally the fields of music neuroscience and music therapy have progressed rather independently but they are now beginning to integrate and merge in clinical neurology providing novel and important information about how music is processed in the damaged or abnormal brain. How structural and functional recovery of the brain can be enhanced by music based rehabilitation methods and what neural mechanisms underlie the therapeutic effects of music. Ideally this information can be used to better understand how and why music works in rehabilitation and to develop more effective music based applications that can be targeted and tailored towards individual rehabilitation needs. The aim of this Research Topic is to bring together research across multiple disciplines with a special focus on music, brain and neurological rehabilitation. We encourage researchers working in the field to submit a paper presenting either original empirical research, novel theoretical or conceptual perspectives, a review or methodological advances related to following two core topics: 1) how are musical skills and attributes e.g. perceiving music, experiencing music emotionally, playing or singing affected by a developmental or acquired neurological illness or disorder, for example stroke, aphasia, brain injury, Alzheimer's disease, Parkinson's disease, autism, ADHD, dyslexia, focal dystonia or tinnitus; and 2) what is the applicability, effectiveness and mechanisms of music based rehabilitation methods for persons with a neurological illness or disorder. Research methodology can include behavioural, physiological and/or neuroimaging techniques and studies can be either clinical group studies or case studies. Studies of healthy subjects are applicable only if their findings have clear clinical implications.
