The Golden Clime:

Tennyson's Poems R. H. Winnick, 2019-04-18 In Tennyson's Poems New Textual Parallels R H Winnick identifies more than a thousand previously unknown instances in which Tennyson phrases of two or three to as many as several words are similar or identical to those occurring in prior works by other hands discoveries aided by the proliferation of digitized texts and the related development of powerful search tools over the three decades since the most recent major edition of Tennyson's poems was published Each of these instances may be deemed an allusion meant to be recognized as such and pointing for definable purposes to a particular antecedent text an echo conscious or not deliberate or not meant to be noticed or not meaningful or not or merely accidental Unless accidental Winnick writes these new textual parallels significantly expand our knowledge both of Tennyson's reading and of his thematic intentions and artistic technique Coupled with the thousand plus textual parallels previously reported by Christopher Ricks and other scholars he says they suggest that a fundamental and lifelong aspect of Tennyson's art was his habit of echoing any work ancient or modern which had the potential to enhance the resonance or deepen the meaning of his poems The new textual parallels Winnick has identified point most often to the King James Bible and to such canonical authors as Shakespeare Milton Dryden Pope Thomson Cowper Shelley Byron and Wordsworth But they also point to many authors rarely if ever previously cited in Tennyson editions and studies including Michael Drayton Richard Blackmore Isaac Watts Erasmus Darwin John Ogilvie Anna Letitia Barbauld Letitia Elizabeth Landon John Wilson and with surprising frequency Felicia Hemans Tennyson's Poems New Textual Parallels is thus a major new resource for Tennyson scholars and students an indispensable adjunct to the 1987 edition of Tennyson's complete poems edited by Christopher Ricks

The Impact of Organizational Ethical Climate on Organizational Commitment and Job Performance Keikoh Ryu, 2020-04-03 This study seeks to evaluate the impact of organizational ethical climate on the organizational commitment and job performance of Japanese funded manufacturing enterprises JFMEs in China using empirical analysis and discussion and includes a review of related research into economic ethics as well as a quantitative analysis of the various types of organizational ethical climates typically found in JFMEs operating in China While prior studies have approached the topic from an ethical psychological philosophical and or sociological perspective none have specifically analyzed organizational ethical climate and its effect on organizational commitment and job performance under these conditions Nor has an analysis of the relationship between organizational ethical climate organizational commitment and job performance ever been approached from the perspective of economic ethics This study illustrates the feasibility of researching organizational ethics from an economic perspective while laying out a theoretical basis for exploring the philosophy of economics from the perspective of economic ethics

Rethinking Authority in Global Climate

Governance Thomas Hickmann, 2015-10-16 In the past few years numerous authors have highlighted the emergence of transnational climate initiatives such as city networks private certification schemes and business self regulation in the policy domain of climate change While these transnational governance arrangements can surely contribute to solving the problem of climate change their development by different types of sub and non state actors does not imply a weakening of the intergovernmental level On the contrary many transnational climate initiatives use the international climate regime as a point of reference and have adopted various rules and procedures from international agreements Rethinking Authority in Global Climate Governance puts forward this argument and expands upon it using case studies which suggest that the effective operation of transnational climate initiatives strongly relies on the existence of an international regulatory framework created by nation states Thus this book emphasizes the centrality of the intergovernmental process clustered around the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change UNFCCC and underscores that multilateral treaty making continues to be more important than many scholars and policy makers suppose This book will be of great interest to students and scholars of global environmental politics climate change and sustainable development Climate Change Adaptation in Pacific Countries Walter Leal Filho, 2017-02-07 This book showcases vital lessons learned from research field projects and best practice examples with regard to climate change adaptation in countries throughout the Pacific region a part of the planet that is particularly vulnerable to and affected by climate change The book's primary goals are to document the wealth of experiences in the region available today to encourage cross sector interactions among the various stakeholders in the region and to help transfer results to other countries and regions Accordingly it gathers a set of papers presented at a symposium on climate change adaptation held in Fiji in July 2016 focusing on Fostering Resilience and Improving the Quality of Life In these contributions local and international experts present a variety of initiatives showing how Pacific countries are coping with the many problems associated with climate change including initiatives in education and awareness work taking place across the region operational aspects and their implications for policy making and challenges in urban and rural areas Responding to Climate Change Paul Burton, 2014-11-05 South East Queensland has been one of the fastest growing regions of Australia both in terms of its rapidly growing population and an ever expanding built environment It is also one of the most vulnerable regions likely to suffer from the adverse impacts of climate change especially increased flooding storms coastal erosion and drought Responding to Climate Change Lessons from an Australian Hotspot brings together the results of cutting edge research from members of the Griffith Climate Change Response Program showing how best to respond to anticipated changes and how to overcome barriers to adaptation The authors treat climate change adaptation as a cross cutting multi level governance policy challenge extending across human settlements infrastructure ecosystems water management primary industries emergency management and human health The research focuses on but is not limited to the experience of climate change adaptation in the recognised climate hotspot of South East Queensland The results of this research will be of interest to planners policy makers and other practitioners engaged in urban and environmental planning coastal management public health emergency management and physical
