

A photograph of a person sitting on the forest floor, looking up at the towering trees. The person is wearing a blue long-sleeved shirt and dark pants. The forest floor is covered in green moss and fallen leaves. The trees are tall and thin, with brown bark and green leaves. The lighting is natural, coming from the sun filtering through the trees.

Taller Than Trees Roger Young,2012-12-18 Southern Rhodesia Central Africa March 1914 A trooper of police sent to contain a lawless settlement near Bulawayo the countrys largest city told on his arrival there that all the violence was caused by government restrictions not true took them at their word and made a single simple rule No one may initiate the use of force including me simple because to him it was no more than a policemens job Common Law would be upheld he said robbery rape fraud etc Statute Law restrictions wouldnt If they obeyed it so would he that was the deal and his grim reputation needed only to be tested once After this he withdrew and let them all get on with their affairs He was thought to be from the American Far West and his rule being based upon a moral principle initiating force is wrong which cant be circumvented by the Law police politics or even at the will of a majority with taxes and legislation set aside and everything done willy nilly by agreement not by vote sure enough and right away Queenstown became like one in the American Far West a free society But with this difference no force eliminated anything to do with government Question But how can a society exist let alone succeed without a government Answer This is what the book is all about Taller Than Trees or the Search for Order Roger Young,2017-03-07 With nearly twenty men engaged Willoughbys kitchen garden was appreciably expanding The survivors from twelve hours ago worked willingly but of a pair engaged in breaking ground one seemed less than used to it

Morphological Plant Modeling: Unleashing Geometric and Topological Potential within the Plant Sciences Alexander Bucksch,Dan Chitwood,2017-10-13 An increasing population faces the growing demand for agricultural products and accurate global climate models that account for individual plant morphologies to predict favorable human habitat Both demands are rooted in an improved understanding of the mechanistic origins of plant development Such understanding requires geometric and topological descriptors to characterize the phenotype of plants and its link to genotypes However the current plant phenotyping framework relies on simple length and diameter measurements which fail to capture the exquisite architecture of plants The Research Topic Morphological Plant Modeling Unleashing Geometric and Topological Potential within the Plant Sciences is the result of a workshop held at National Institute for Mathematical and Biological Synthesis NIMBioS in Knoxville Tennessee From 2 4 September 2015 over 40 scientists from mathematics computer science engineering physics and biology came together to set new frontiers in combining plant phenotyping with recent results from shape theory at the interface of geometry and topology In doing so the Research Topic synthesizes the views from multiple disciplines to reveal the potential of new mathematical concepts to analyze and quantify the relationship between morphological plant features As such the Research Topic bundles examples of new mathematical techniques including persistent homology graph theory and shape statistics to tackle questions in crop breeding developmental biology and vegetation modeling The challenge to model plant morphology under field conditions is a central theme of the included papers to address the problems of climate change and food security that require the integration of plant biology and mathematics from geometry and topology research applied to imaging and simulation techniques The introductory white paper written by the workshop participants identifies future directions in research education and policy making to integrate biological and mathematical approaches and to strengthen research at the interface of both disciplines
