

Documentary Research Strategy to Research Canada

Documentary Research: Ethnographic ethnography	1. Research aims  Documentary Research aims to explore and understand the experiences of individuals and groups in a particular social context. This is achieved through the collection and analysis of documents, which are defined as any written or recorded material that provides information about a particular topic or issue. This can include a wide range of materials, from official records and government documents to personal letters and diaries. The aim of Documentary Research is to use these documents to gain a deeper understanding of the social and cultural context in which they were produced and to explore the ways in which they have been used and interpreted over time. 2. Research design  Documentary Research is a qualitative research method that involves the collection and analysis of documents. The design of the research is determined by the research aims and the types of documents that are available. This can involve a range of techniques, from archival research to the use of digital technologies to access online documents. The design should also take into account the ethical considerations of working with documents, such as ensuring that the documents are properly stored and protected from loss or damage. 3. Data collection  The data collection process in Documentary Research involves the identification and location of relevant documents. This can be done through a variety of methods, including searching archives, libraries, and online databases. Once the documents have been located, they are then collected and organized into a systematic format. This may involve creating a list of documents, with details of their location and content, and then copying or scanning the documents into a digital format. 4. Data analysis  The data analysis process in Documentary Research involves the interpretation and analysis of the collected documents. This is done through a range of techniques, including content analysis, discourse analysis, and narrative analysis. These techniques involve identifying the key themes and issues in the documents and exploring the ways in which they have been used and interpreted over time. The analysis should also take into account the social and cultural context in which the documents were produced and the ways in which they have been used and interpreted over time. 5. Research findings  The research findings in Documentary Research are the results of the data analysis process. These findings are typically presented in the form of a report or a book, which provides a detailed account of the research process and the results of the analysis. The findings should also include a discussion of the implications of the research for our understanding of the social and cultural context in which the documents were produced and the ways in which they have been used and interpreted over time.
