

A woman with long dark hair is sitting at a light-colored wooden table. She is wearing a white t-shirt and a long, patterned, textured skirt. Her hands are resting on the table. In front of her is a wicker basket containing a loaf of bread and some other items. The background is slightly blurred, showing what appears to be a stone structure.

So deep is her infatuation that if she can't have it all to herself she'll only be satisfied with buying her own little piece of Paris. The object of her desire seems so simple the sort of apartment she's seen a thousand times in magazines and books. Something effortlessly charming and old and quirky and expertly decorated. Something exuding character and Parisian chic. Something quintessentially French. The trouble is she has only two short weeks in which to realise her fantasy and she must somehow negotiate a deal in a foreign language without offending French real estate etiquette. Is this even vaguely possible or just a ridiculous folly? With her trusty French phrasebook in hand and plucking up her reserves of savoir faire Ellie embarks on the adventure of a lifetime. Beauty is everywhere even if like all true romances there are many obstacles to be overcome. But then c'est toujours comme à Paris. Buying a Piece of Paris is a charming and witty love song to the most beautiful city in the world.
