Students demonstrate an ability to describe an experience after reading historic documents simply from the documents without specifying or putting the experience in a particular (the best or worst) circumstance that it occurred. Students write good after reading documents, demonstrating success. The typical student who has been struggling to write good answers this year will be surprised that writing is easier and, without thinking, they provide answers to questions without an introduction. The student struggles to write good answers, and it becomes clear that it is not a lack of knowledge or ability to write good answers, but a lack of understanding of the writing process. Students are surprised to find that writing is not a difficult task, and they are able to write good answers to questions without an introduction.
