

Employers must ensure that the DSOs are used consistently and properly for all employees in their workforce. This may be done in many ways. For example, employers may flag the DSOs on an employee's personnel file, or they may use the information contained in the DSOs to create other internal records and systems used to evaluate the performance of the DSOs. In the case of a DSO, employers may want to designate a person or persons to monitor the DSOs. If the employer does not have an DSO, the employer or a person or persons should be designated to monitor the DSOs.
