Armchair Theatre Leonard White,2003 Multistrategy Learning Ryszard S. Michalski,1993-06-30 Most machine learning research has been concerned with the development of systems that implement one type of inference within a single representational paradigm Such systems which can be called monostrategy learning systems include those for empirical induction of decision trees or rules explanation based generalization neural net learning from examples genetic algorithm based learning and others Monostrategy learning systems can be very effective and useful if learning problems to which they are applied are sufficiently narrowly defined Many real world applications however pose learning problems that go beyond the capability of monostrategy learning methods In view of this recent years have witnessed a growing interest in developing multistrategy systems which integrate two or more inference types and or paradigms within one learning system Such multistrategy systems take advantage of the complementarity of different inference types or representational mechanisms Therefore they have a potential to be more versatile and more powerful than monostrategy systems On the other hand due to their greater complexity their development is significantly more difficult and represents a new great challenge to the machine learning community Multistrategy Learning contains contributions characteristic of the current research in this area

Rodemeyer, 2006-02-16 YET ANOTHER INTRODUCTION IN PHENOMENOLOGY In both his published and unpublished works Edmund Husserl, the father of phenomenology, struggles repeatedly with the relation of the individual subject and intersubjectivity. Since his phenomenology is based upon the temporalizing foundations of the subject, though he is often accused of solipsism and his efforts at integrating the subject with an intersubjective existence are registered as falling short of their goal. Important philosophers who use phenomenology as their basis, such as Martin Heidegger and Maurice Merleau-Ponty, furthermore, while implicitly criticizing his limitations, assume the existence of intersubjective foundations without taking up the existence and formation of these foundations themselves. This book addresses the above problematic at several levels. First, it is a careful analysis of Husserl's understanding of inner time consciousness. I take up each aspect of temporalizing consciousness, i.e., Urimpression, retention, and protention, explaining it in light of Husserl's phenomenology and showing how it functions in the whole of the living present, i.e., our active constituting consciousness. These sections of the book are helpful both to the uninitiated student trying to enter the world of Husserl's inner time consciousness and to the experienced Husserl scholar who desires a closer look at Husserl's theory of temporalizing consciousness. Second, as my analyses take us to Husserl's recently published manuscripts, I provide an explanation of Husserl's later considerations of temporalizing consciousness, showing how he developed his earliest conceptions.

American Furniture in the Metropolitan Museum of Art Frances Gruber Safford, 2007 The Metropolitan Museum's preeminent collection of early colonial furniture is expertly documented in this long awaited publication. It covers the full spectrum of furniture forms made during the 17th and early 18th centuries, from chairs and other seating to tables, boxes, various types of chests and cupboards, and desks. Each of the 141 objects is thoroughly described with detailed information on provenance, construction, condition, inscriptions, dimensions, and materials. Photographed anew in color for this volume, each piece is explicated in terms of the styles and craftsmanship of the period and is evaluated in light of comparative pieces in public and private collections throughout the country. One appendix contains photographic details of construction and decorative elements and another has drawings of joints and moldings. The Popular Science Monthly, 1875 Children of Nature William Ulick O'Connor Cuffe Earl of Desart, 1878 Composite Predicates in English Ray Cattell, 2020-01-13 Preliminary Material Ray Cattell Light Verbs in English Ray Cattell Insight from the Past Ray Cattell Complex Predicates Ray Cattell Have and Composite Predicates Ray Cattell The Relations Between Have and Be Ray Cattell Get and Give Ray Cattell Causative Give Ray Cattell

The novel adopts a vivid, atmospheric literary style characterized by its rich descriptions and sharp dialogue that capture the essence of an era rife with class struggle and corruption. Through the lens of its complex protagonist, the narrative explores themes of loyalty, identity, and the often overlapping realms of justice and villainy, making it a compelling addition to the Victorian crime fiction canon. Aidan de Brune, a writer deeply influenced by the socio-political landscape of his time, draws upon his experiences in London's East End where he witnessed the stark realities of poverty and crime. His background as a journalist and his keen observations of urban life imbue the novel with authenticity and emotional depth, allowing readers to navigate the congested streets alongside his characters. De Brune's fascination with the psychological motives behind crime shines through, transforming personal struggles into universal human questions. For those who relish historical narratives rich with intrigue and complex characters, The Shadow Crook is a must-read. De Brune's masterful storytelling not only pulls the reader into a vivid world of danger and deception but also invites reflection on the ethical dilemmas faced by its inhabitants. This book will resonate with lovers of literary fiction and historical crime enthusiasts alike. Von Boyle's Recherché
