Personal Ontology Andrew Brenner,2024-04-24 What are we Are we for example souls organisms brains or something else In this book Andrew Brenner argues that there are principled obstacles to our discovering the answer to this fundamental metaphysical question The main competing accounts of personal ontology hold that we are either souls or composites of soul and body or we are composite physical objects of some sort but as Brenner shows arguments for either of these options can be parodied and transformed into their opposites Brenner also examines arguments for and against the existence of the self offers a detailed discussion of the metaphysics of several afterlife scenarios resurrection reincarnation and mind uploading and considers whether agnosticism with respect to personal ontology should lead us to agnosticism with respect to the possibility of life after death

In and Out of Our Right Minds Diane Brown,Verna Keith,2003-10-01 African American women have commonly been portrayed as pillars of their communities resilient mothers sisters wives and grandmothers who remain steadfast in the face of all adversities While these portrayals imply that African American women have few psychological problems the scientific literature and demographic data present a different picture They reveal that African American women are at increased risk for psychological distress because of factors that disproportionately affect them including lower incomes greater poverty and unemployment unmarried motherhood racism and poor physical health Yet at the same time rates of mental illness are low This invaluable book is the first comprehensive examination of the contradictions between the strengths and vulnerabilities of this population Using the contexts of race gender and social class In and Out of Our Right Minds challenges the traditional notions of mental health and mental illness as they apply to African American women

Developing Professional Memory Paul Tarpey,2018-09-11 In Developing Professional Memory the author examines narratives from progressive and radical London based English teachers who began their careers between 1965 and 1975 English teaching in this period which the author defines as a cauldron of competing and contested currents is often portrayed negatively in dominant discourses around the subject The teachers narratives however provide a much more nuanced and positive story By recovering and documenting the collective Professional Memory of English teachers in a particular conjuncture this volume offers a compelling practitioner account of events and developments and proves that learning from Professional Memory has transformative potential The author argues that by critically confronting narratives practices and existing conjunctural circumstances current practitioners might develop greater agency in debates around their professional roles and responsibilities
