The Domesday Project:

The Domesday Project Alistair Ross, 1987 Medieval Statistics Mark Casson, John S. Lee, 2024-12-26 This book is the first to systematically examine the sources of medieval statistics. It will be useful as a handbook for researchers in financial and cultural history as a history of financial record keeping and as a review of recent research into medieval finance and accounting based on statistical sources. Medieval statistics provide a unique window on the past. Medieval documents produced by royal governments, monastic and ecclesiastical institutions, urban boroughs and legal cases for debt recovery provide a mine of useful information on economic life and financial affairs. They show that medieval administration was far more numerate and far more sophisticated than is usually recognized. This book provides a comprehensive review of the key sources written by leading experts in the field. The strengths and weaknesses of each source are reviewed using original documents for illustration and discussing examples from the recent literature. The book is mainly concerned with English statistics as they have survived particularly well in both state and private records but which showcase the potential of digital technology in enabling systematic study of medieval primary sources where large databases can now be compiled from original manuscripts. This edited volume will be a valuable tool for those working in financial, cultural and political history as it seeks to analyse the various ways in which medieval life was documented numerically and the ways in which this information was used within existing power structures. The Domesday Project British Broadcasting Corporation, 1985

E. Baxter Wynne Edwin Baxter, 1877 Now the Chips Are Down Alison Gazzard, 2024-05-21 The story of a pioneering microcomputer, its beginnings as part of a national Computer Literacy Project, its innovative hardware and its creative uses. In 1982 the British Broadcasting Corporation launched its Computer Literacy Project intended to introduce interested adults to the world of computers and computing. The BBC accompanied this initiative with television programs, courses, books and software, an early experiment in multi-platform education. The BBC along with Acorn Computers also introduced the BBC Microcomputer which would be at the forefront of the campaign. The BBC Micro was designed to meet the needs of users in homes and schools to demystify computing and to counter the general pessimism among the media in Britain about technology. In this book Alison Gazzard looks at the BBC Micro, examining the early capabilities of multi-platform content generation and consumption and the multiple literacies this approach enabled, not only in programming and software creation but also in accessing information across a range of media and in doing it yourself computing. She links many of these early developments to current new media practices. Gazzard looks at games developed for the BBC Micro including Granny's Garden, an educational game for primary schools, and Elite, the seminal space trading game. She considers the shift in focus from hardware to peripherals, describing the Teletext Adapter as an early model for software distribution and the Domesday

Project which combined texts video and still photographs as a hypermedia like experience Gazzard s account shows the BBC Micro not only as a vehicle for various literacies but also as a user oriented machine that pushed the boundaries of what could be achieved in order to produce something completely new The Domesday Project, by Information Transfer, Cambridge Cambridge Information transfer,1986 The Constitutional Year Book ,1892 The Domesday Inquest and the Making of Domesday Book Rex Welldon Finn,1966 Catalogue.
