The Land and Conservation Anne Harris, Carolyn Harrison, Peter Smithson, 1973

Setting Priorities for Land

Conservation Committee on Scientific and Technical Criteria for Federal Acquisition of Lands for Conservation, 1993-01-15

This book responds to a congressional request to evaluate criteria by which land is acquired under the Land and Water Conservation Fund. The committee reviews criteria and procedures by which four agencies acquire lands for conservation, examines the historic public policy and scientific bases of criteria and compares them with nongovernmental organizations and assesses the effectiveness of the agencies in preserving natural resources while achieving agency objectives.

Friends of the Land Friends of the Land (U.S.), 1940 For Love of the Land R. Neil Sampson, 1985

In the spring of 1935 the skies of New York and Washington D.C. were darkened by windblown soils from farms of Texas and Oklahoma. Congressmen could taste the grit in their mouths as they listened to Hugh Hammond Bennett testify about the need for a national soil conservation program. Conservation districts, local units of government designed to guide soil and water conservation work, led the action to get soil erosion under control. For Love of the Land tells the story of their founding, recounting how they built a national organization, the National Association of Conservation Districts (NACD), to represent them in the fight for a sound national conservation program. For Love of the Land also describes the people whose bold ideas sparked the conservation movement. The characters are strong: Hugh Bennett, charismatic leader of the Soil Conservation Service; E.C. MacArthur, the dedicated first president of NACD from South Carolina who didn't see why World War II equipment shouldn't go to conservation districts; Water Davis, the burly Texas rancher who tackled conservation with the same energy that he used to organize his timber, cotton, cattle, and grain holdings. Additionally, this book provides a track record of the accomplishments and the unfinished agenda of the conservation movement in this country. Keeping soil on the land and out of our waters is a goal everyone agrees upon. But how to get that job done is another matter. Should the federal government mandate erosion and pollution control standards? Who should set the priorities for resource conservation work? What happens when the goals of environmentalists conflict with the economic needs of farmers? Author R. Neil Sampson introduces us to the complex array of conservation programs that have grown as our national answer to those questions. Woven into the texture of the book are the many quieter achievements of NACD, the founding and growth of its conservation awards programs, its weekly newsletter, Ladies Auxiliary, and the programs that reach out to districts with needed services to get conservation on the land and protect the nation's waters. This book provides an inside look at how the soil and water conservation programs and policies in the United States were developed and why they work as they do. About the Author: R. Neil Sampson operates a natural resource consulting firm in Alexandria, Virginia. He was executive vice president of the National Association of Conservation Districts from 1978 to 1984. A native of Idaho, he has degrees in agronomy from the University of Idaho and public administration from Harvard University. 1700s It goes beyond the usual focus on conservation successes to provide a critical assessment of both public and private land acquisition efforts The book shows that for more than 200 years both private purchasers such as the Nature Conservancy and the Trust for Public Land and governmental agencies have acquired land for conservation It documents trends of growing complexity in transactions and a blurring of public and private roles The preservation of Mount Vernon and its grounds for example began with a private group the Mount Vernon Ladies Association of the Union and continues today with a mosaic of private state and federal actors The current emphasis on private land trust acquisitions the authors argue may undercut other effective governmental efforts to preserve the environment and may not be the best way to meet conservation goals Buying Nature emphasizes the accountability issues that arise when the line between public and private efforts is indistinct The authors also pay unique attention to how federal land agencies individual histories shape their participation in modern land acquisition transactions An unusual mix of scholarship the book combines political legal and constitutional and economic history with rich case studies of land conservation and quantitative analyses of acquisitions over time to provide a new and distinctive perspective on enduring questions of public policy and environmental protection
