through a certain number of the cars, I decided that the number when stopped would be too many for the people to get out of, across the road. The crowd had swelled, however, immensely, and would require an even longer time. The train had stopped and I stopped the approaching engine (every one could be easily seen from the station house) and the station master, who had observed the increasing crowd, called me from across the platform, and informed me that all engines and the waiting passengers should cross through the station on Main Street. However, when I stopped the approaching train, people did not get off. There were, however, about
