The Accountability Connection:

How Did That Happen? Roger Connors, Tom Smith, 2009-08-11 The New York Times bestseller that provides a simple proven approach to improve accountability and the bottom line. The economy crashes, the government misfires, businesses fail, leaders don't lead, managers don't manage, and people don't follow through, leaving us asking 'How did that happen?' Surprises caused by a lack of personal accountability plague almost every organization today, from the political arena to large and small businesses. 'How Did That Happen' offers a proven way to eliminate these nasty surprises and gain an unbeatable competitive edge and enhance performance by holding others accountable the positive, principled way. As the experts on workplace accountability and the authors of 'The Oz Principle', Roger Connors and Tom Smith tackle the next crucial step everyone can take whether working as a manager, supervisor, CEO or individual performer, creating greater accountability in all the people on whom you depend.

Education Decentralization and Accountability Relationships in Latin America Emanuela Di Gropello, 2004 Di Gropello analyzes decentralization reforms in the education sector in Latin America, their status, impact, and ongoing challenges by making use of the accountability framework developed by the World Development Report 2004 'Making Services Work for Poor People'. She starts by identifying three main groups of models according to the subnational actors involved, the pattern adopted in the distribution of functions across subnational actors, and the accountability system central to the model. She then reviews the impact of these models according to the available empirical evidence and explores determinants of this impact, extracting lessons useful to the design of future reforms. The author concludes that the single most important factor in ensuring the success or failure of a reform is the way the accountability relationships are set to work within each of the models and provides some lessons on how to get these relationships to work effectively. She also provides three main general lessons for selecting successful models: 1. avoid complicated models, 2. increase school autonomy and the scope for client power, maintaining a clear role for the other accountability relationships, and 3. place more emphasis on the management accountability relationship and the sustainability of the models.
