Implosion-driven Hypervelocity Launchers and Shock Tubes I. I. Glass, University of Toronto. Institute for Aerospace Studies,1970 A critical appraisal is made of the design research development and operation of the novel UTIAS implosion driven hypervelocity launchers and shock tubes Explosively driven PbN<sub>6</sub> lead azide PETN pentaerythritetetranitrate implosions in detonating stoichiometric hydrogen oxygen mixtures have been successfully developed as drivers for hypervelocity launchers and shock tubes in a safe and reusable facility Intense loadings at very high calculated pressures almost megabar range densities g cc and temperatures thousands deg K at the implosion centre cause severe problems with projectile integrity Misalignment of the focal point can occur and add to the difficulty in using small calibre 6 to 8 mm dia projectiles In addition the extreme driving conditions cause barrel expansion erosion and possible gas leakage from the base to the head of the projectile which cut the predicted muzzle velocities to half or a third of the lossless calculated values However in the case of a shock tube operation these difficulties are minimized or eliminated and the possibilities of approaching Jovian reentry velocities are encouraging In a recent run using about 100g of explosive PETN and 400 psi 2H<sub>2</sub> O<sub>2</sub> a shock Mach number approx 60 was obtained in air at an initial pressure of 1 torr in 1 0 in dia shock tube channel In addition the use of focused explosive driven implosion waves may have many other physical and technological applications
