

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine if there were differences in the prevalence of self-reported depression between men and women who had been exposed to violence by intimate partners. Data from the National Longitudinal Study of Women's Health are used. Results show that among those who have ever been married, 6% of men and 8% of women reported having experienced depression in the past year. Among those who had been married and were currently married, 7% of men and 9% of women reported having experienced depression in the past year. Among those who had been married and were currently separated or divorced, 10% of men and 12% of women reported having experienced depression in the past year. These results suggest that exposure to violence by intimate partners may be associated with higher rates of self-reported depression.
