Solar Energy Heat Pump Systems For Heating And Cooling Buildings:

Solar and Heat Pump Systems for Residential Buildings Jean-Christophe Hadorn, 2015-06-29 The combination of heat pumps and solar components is a recent development and has great potential for improving the energy efficiency of house and hot water heating systems. As a consequence it can enhance the energy footprint of a building substantially. This work compares different systems, analyses their performance and illustrates monitoring techniques. It helps the reader to design, simulate and assess solar and heat pump systems. Good examples of built systems are discussed in detail and advice is given on how to design the most efficient system. This book is the first one about this combination of components and presents the state of the art of this technology. It is based on a joint research project of two programmes of the International Energy Agency, the Solar Heating and Cooling Programme SHC and the Heat Pump Programme. More than 50 experts from 13 countries have participated in this research.

Solar Energy Heat Pump Systems for Heating and Cooling Buildings Stanley Francis Gilman, 1976 A thorough presentation and state of the art this book grew out of a recent workshop held at The Pennsylvania State University cosponsored by the U S Energy Research and Development Administration Society of Heating Refrigerating and Air Conditioning Engineers Inc. The objectives of the workshop were to bring together researcher consulting engineers product development engineers manufacturers public utility representatives and the interested public to exchange information and ideas on this important topic. The book includes status reports on NSF and ERDA funded projects descriptions and discussions of recent designs and applications presentations of equipment and performance characteristics public utility viewpoints on systems potentials an explanation of the present federal programs and an identification of future research and development needs.

Advanced Energy Efficiency Technologies for Solar Heating, Cooling and Power Generation Xudong Zhao, Xiaoli Ma, 2019-07-08 This book based on the research experience and outcomes of a group of international contributors addresses a range of advanced energy efficiency technologies and their applications in solar heating cooling and power generation while also providing solutions for tackling recurring low efficiency problems in today's systems. It highlights the latest technologies and methods which can significantly improve the performance of solar systems enabling readers to design, construct and apply high performance solar systems in or for their own projects. The contributors provide a systematic introduction to state of the art energy efficiency technologies that demonstrates how to implement innovative solar systems. These technologies include heat pipes and loop heat pipes, phase change materials PCMs and PCM slurries, micro channel panels, desiccant adsorption cycling, ejector cooling and heat pumps, and solar concentration and thermoelectric units. The book shows how innovative solar systems applicable to rural and urban buildings can be analysed and demonstrates the successful implementation of these advanced technologies. It delivers the design principles and associated energy performance assessment methods for a range of selected solar heating cooling and power generation projects. This book offers a valuable source of information for final year undergraduate students as well as graduate students and academic lecturers as it promotes the widespread deployment of advanced solar heating cooling and power generation technologies applicable for buildings across the globe. The book is also a good point of reference for design engineers and energy consultants who wish to extend their knowledge of advanced technologies used to achieve energy efficiency.
