Physical Aspects of Soil Water and Salts in Ecosystems A. Hadas, 1973 The papers collected in this book were given and discussed at the symposium on Soil water physics and technology which was held in Rehovot Israel from August 19th September 4th 1971 It was sponsored by the International Society of Soil Science I S S S through its Commissions I soil physics and VI soil technology and organized by the Israeli Soil Science Society Thanks are due to the Editors for having assembled contributions and discussion remarks into a well rounded coherent book The subjects covered in this book are the theoretical and practical aspects of the following topics water movement in soils soil water interactions evaporation from soil and plants water requirements of crops ion activity and migration in soils soilwater management and salinity In as much as these contributions were not solicited they represent ideas and subjects considered important by the authors and debators In science one often finds a gap between basic research and practical application If reading this book creates a feeling of an apparent lack of balance between theory and practice this represents the state of our science today and the thoughtful reader can and will recognize that much remains to be done W R GARDNER T MAR5HAL President Commission I President Commission VI 1 5 5 5     Horse Pasture Management Paul H. Salt effects on water movement in usaturated Yolo loam soil are explored by comparing soil water diffusivity values determined by Bruce and Klute s method in soil columns treated with SAR values 0 5 and 15 and wetted with water containing 15 5 2 and 0 me 1 Sorptivity values for these conditions are also compared Total soil solution concentration estimated by electrical conductivity measurements and NA and CA concentrations measured by flame photometry are discussed Salt effects on soil water diffusivity were more pronounced at larger values of water content Movement of water in Ca saturated samples was significantly affected only when the soil solution concentration was smaller than approximately 2 me 1 Soil samples treated with SAR 5 presented reductions in soil water diffusivity when the solution concentration was equal to or smaller than approximately 3 5 me 1 and the water content larger than 0 35 cm3 cm3 The soil water diffusivity was also affected when the solution concentration was equal to or smaller than approximately 2 me 1 and the water content larger then 0 30 cm3 cm3 Soil water diffusivity of samples treated with SAR 15 was affected basically at all values of water content when the soil solution concentration was equal to or smaller than approximately 3 5 me 1 When such concentration was a large as 5 me 1 reductions in soil water diffusivity were apparent only for water contents larger than 0 25 cm3 cm3 Chemical analyses of soil solution after infiltration revealed that most soluble salts in the soil column were carried near the wetting front Significant displacement of Na by Ca occurred in soils treated with SAR 5 and 15 Although Bruce and Klute s method does not apply for chemically unstable and swelling soils the slope of the plot of distance to the wetting front versus square root of time fitted the Boltzman variable for the water content of wetting front satisfactorily This fact suggests good reliability of reported soil water diffusivity values
