

The background image is a dark, moody photograph of a man and a woman in a professional setting, likely a law firm. The man, on the left, is wearing a dark suit and tie, looking down at a document on a desk. The woman, on the right, is also in professional attire, looking at the same document. In the foreground, on the left, is a small, ornate scale of justice. The overall tone is serious and professional.

Solicitors and Divorce Richard Ingleby,1992 This book examines solicitors activity in the resolution of matrimonial disputes The empirical data on which the book is based were derived from the continuous monitoring of the files of 60 divorcing clients over a period of about 18 months This has enabled an examination which is based on actual observation of correspondence between solicitors court documents and records of conferences and telephone calls The vitality of the data provides an account of out of court activity which has a depth and currency not found in studies based on other methodologies Solicitors interactions with their clients are seen within the context of organizational personal and economic constraints as they endeavour to reconcile the competing demands of their clients their colleagues the courts and the Law Society

Lawyers and Mediators Mavis Maclean,John Eekelaar,2016-02-25 Do lawyers make matters worse or do they provide information advice and support which can help to prevent disputes arising or manage them when they do Do mediators enable parties to communicate and reach agreements tailor made to their needs Or working outside the legal framework do they find it difficult to protect weaker parties and access expert advice What happens when lawyers become mediators This book will describe the structure of service provision and the day to day work of lawyers mediators and lawyer mediators drawing on empirical work carried out between 2013 and 2015 immediately after the recent changes to the management of divorce and separation within the family justice system The reduction in legal aided help in 2013 and the failure of mediation to fill the gap in 2014 15 have given rise to a difficult debate This book aims to provide an account of some of the practical effects of these policies through a description of the daily work of practitioners in the sector It raises the question of whether we need to choose between traditional legal services and the new processes of private ordering or whether intermediate positions might be possible

Deserted Wives and Economic Divorce in 19th-Century England and Wales Jennifer Aston,Olive Anderson,2024-11-14 This book considers Section 21 of the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Act 1857 and its significant impact on previously invisible married women in the 19th century Tens of thousands of women used this little known section of the Act to apply for orders from local magistrates courts to reclaim their rights of testation inheritance property ownership and dependent on local franchise qualifications ability to vote By examining the orders that were made and considering the women who applied for them the book challenges the mistaken belief that Victorian England and Wales were nations of married cohabiting couples The detailed statistical analysis and rich case studies presented here provide a totally new perspective on the legal status and experiences of married women in England and Wales Although many thousands of orders were granted between 1858 and 1900 their details remain unknown and unexamined primarily because census records did not consistently record dissolved marriages and there is no central index of applications made Using sources including court records parliamentary
