Animal palaeopathology can identify diseases in archaeozoological assemblages but little interest has been expressed in investigating and understanding the cultural aspects of the diseases identified. Such assemblages represent the cumulative effects of human attitudes, decisions and influences regarding the keeping, care, treatment, neglect and exploitation of animals which result in a range of conditions, non-infectious diseases and injuries that can be recognised on ancient skeletal material. Additionally, ever since the domestication of a handful of animal species around 10 000 years ago, close physical proximity has been a mutual source of infectious disease and traumatic injury for humans and animals alike. Shuffling Nags, Lamé Ducks provides an invaluable guide to the investigation of trauma and disease in archaeozoological assemblages. It provides a clear methodological approach and describes and explains the wide range of traumatic lesions, infections, diseases, inherited disorders and other pathological changes and anomalies that can be identified. In so doing, it explores the impact that man-made decisions have had on animals, including special aspects of culture that may be reflected in the treatment of diseased or injured animals, often incorporating powerful symbolic or religious roles, and seeks to enhance our understanding of the relationship between man and beast in the past. Chapters include: History of studying pathological animal remains; Differences between human and animal palaeopathology; Methodology; Growth, development and ageing; Traumatic lesions; Inflammatory diseases and bone; Pathological lesions in working animals; Diseases connected to the environment.

Live Stock and Dead Things Hannah Chazin, 2024-12-20. Reconceptualizes human-animal relationships and their political significance in ancient and modern societies. In Live Stock and Dead Things, Hannah Chazin combines zooarchaeology and anthropology to challenge familiar narratives about the role of nonhuman animals in the rise of modern societies. Conventional views of this process tend to see a mostly linear development from hunter-gatherer societies to horticultural and pastoral ones to large-scale agricultural ones and then industrial ones. Along the way, traditional accounts argue that owning livestock as property, along with land and other valuable commodities, introduced social inequality and stratification. Against this, Chazin raises a provocative question: What if domestication wasn't the origin of instrumentalizing nonhuman animals? After all, Chazin argues, these conventional narratives are inherited from conjectural histories and ignore the archaeological data. In her view, the category of domestication flattens the more complex dimensions of humans' relationship to herd animals. In the book's first half, Chazin offers a new understanding of the political possibilities of pastoralism, one that recognizes the powerful role herd animals have played in shaping human notions of power and authority. In the second half, she takes readers into her archaeological fieldwork in the South Caucasus, which sheds further light on herd animals' transformative effect on the economy, social life and ritual. Appealing to anthropologists and archaeologists alike, this daring book offers a reconceptualization of human-animal relationships and their political significance.

Banning,2020-07-27 This second edition of the classic textbook The Archaeologist's Laboratory is a substantially revised work that offers updated information on the archaeological work that follows fieldwork such as the processing and analysis of artifacts and other evidence An overarching theme of this edition is the quality and validity of archaeological arguments and the data we use to support them The book introduces many of the laboratory activities that archaeologists carry out and the ways we can present research results including graphs and artifact illustrations Part I introduces general topics concerning measurement error data quality research design typology probability and databases It also includes data presentation basic artifact conservation and laboratory safety Part II offers brief surveys of the analysis of lithics and ground stone pottery metal artifacts bone and shell artifacts animal and plant remains and sediments as well as dating by stratigraphy seriation and chronometric methods It concludes with a chapter on archaeological illustration and publication A new feature of the book is illustration of concepts through case studies from around the world and from the Palaeolithic to historical archaeology The text is appropriate for senior undergraduate students and will also serve as a useful reference for graduate students and professional archaeologists The British Controversialist and Literary Magazine ,1871
