Theology and the New Histories Gary Macy, 1999. In this collection of essays, members of the College Theology Society explore how Christianity as an historical religion is responding to the challenge of multiple readings of history. The many new ways of writing history—women's history, history written from the perspective of minority groups, new sources of history including those that are non-Western and deconstructivist history—pose challenges to the assumptions of traditional theology. They also affect our understanding of the history of Christianity and of the development of Christian doctrine.

Lone Motherhood in Twentieth-Century Britain, 1998-05-07. During the 1990s, lone mothers reached the top of the political agenda, viewed as both a drain on public expenditure and a moral threat. What has been missing from the debate is an understanding of how we have got to where we are. This timely new study by three leading experts in the field sets out first to investigate the demographics of lone motherhood, how the pathways into lone motherhood have changed, and whether the changes of the last quarter of a century are as dramatic as they appear. Second, it looks at the wider context for the changes in lone motherhood in terms of ideas about marriage and the changes in the construction of the never-married mother from victim in the 1950s to parasite in the late 1980s. Finally, it examines the way in which policies have defined the problem of lone motherhood over time and the way in which lone mothers have been treated with regard to housing, social security, and employment. The study concludes that there is little possibility of putting the genie back in the bottle in terms of reducing the number of lone mothers; efforts to do so by reducing public expenditure on them may be effective but at the expense of the children involved. Instead, the authors urge policy makers to change focus again and pay more attention to investing in

Meyer, 2010 William J Meyer engages in critical and illuminating conversation with major figures in contemporary philosophy and theology in order to explain why theology has been marginalized in modern culture and why modernity has had such difficulty integrating religion and public life Wrestling with notable philosophers like MacIntyre and Stout and theologians such as Gustafson Hauerwas Porter Milbank and Reinhold Niebuhr Meyer argues that theology must embrace modernity's formal commitments to public and democratic discourse while simultaneously challenging its substantive postmetaphysical outlook Drawing on the philosophical perspectives of Whitehead and Hartshorne and the theologies of Ogden and Gamwell he concludes that a process metaphysical theology offers the most promising path for theology to regain a vital public voice in the world of the twenty first century
