The Archaeology Of The Roman Economy:

The Archaeology of the Roman Economy Kevin Greene,1986 Kevin Greene shows how archaeology can help provide a more balanced view of the Roman economy by informing the classical historian about geographical areas and classes of society that received little attention from the largely aristocratic classical writers whose work survives “The Archaeology of the Roman Economy Kevin Greene,1990 Quantifying the Roman Economy Alan Bowman,Andrew Wilson,2009-06-25

This collection of essays is the first volume in a new series Oxford Studies on the Roman Economy Edited by the series editors it focuses on the economic performance of the Roman empire analysing the extent to which Roman political domination of the Mediterranean and north west Europe created the conditions for the integration of agriculture production trade and commerce across the regions of the empire Using the evidence of both documents and archaeology the contributors suggest how we can derive a quantified account of economic growth and contraction in the period of the empire s greatest extent and prosperity The Archaeology of the Roman Empire Ian Archibald Richmond,1957 Ancient Economies, Modern Methodologies Peter Fibiger Bang,Mamoru Ikeguchi,Harmut G. Ziche,2006 Ancient Economies Modern Methodologies is a collection of essays which focuses on the art of questioning it is about ideas and analytical experiment

Ancient economic history has developed enormously since the publication of M I Finley s The Ancient Economy in 1973 Much new material has been brought to bear on the debate on the character of economic life in the Greek and Roman world But at the same time discussions have been going round in circles This is because not enough attention has been given to the questions ancient historians ask and the concepts with which they approach the economy In this collection an attempt is made to renew the terms of the debate by presenting a wide variety of new analytical approaches to ancient economic history ranging from literary theory cross cultural comparison statistical analysis of archaeological data to neo institutional economics and model building Trade, Commerce, and the State in the Roman World Andrew Wilson,Alan K.

Bowman,2018 In this volume papers by leading Roman historians and archaeologists discuss trade within the Roman Empire and beyond its frontiers between c 100 BC and AD 350 focusing especially on the role of the Roman state in shaping the institutional framework for trade As part of a novel interdisciplinary approach to the subject the chapters address its myriad facets on the basis of broadly different sources of evidence historical papyrological andarchaeological demonstrating how collaborations with the elite holders of wealth within the empire fundamentally changed its political character in the longer term The Origins of the Roman Economy Gabriele Cifani,2020-12-17 Focuses on the economic history of the community of Rome from the Iron Age to the early Republic Recycling and Reuse in the Roman Economy Chloë N. Duckworth,Andrew Wilson,2020-09-10 The recycling and reuse of materials and objects were extensive in the past but have rarely been embedded into models of the economy even more rarely has any attempt been made to address the scale of these practices Recent developments including the use of large datasets computational modelling and high resolution analytical chemistry are increasingly offering the means to reconstruct recycling and reuse and even to approach the thorny issue of quantification. This volume is the first to bring together these new approaches and the first to present a consideration of recycling and reuse in the Roman economy taking into account a range of materials and using a variety of methodological approaches. It presents integrated cross referential evidence for the recycling and reuse of textiles, papyrus, statuary and building materials, amphorae, metals and glass and examines significant questions about organization, value and the social meaning of recycling.

The Romans and Trade André Tchernia, 2016-11-10 Andr Tchernia is one of the leading experts on amphorae as a source of economic history, a pioneer of maritime archaeology and author of a wealth of articles on Roman trade, notably the wine trade. This book brings together the author's previously published essays updated and revised with recent notes and prefaced with an entirely new synthesis of his views on Roman commerce with a particular emphasis on the people involved in it. The book is divided into two main parts. The first is a general study of the structure of Roman trade. Landowners and traders, traders' fortunes, the matter of the market, the role of the state and dispatching what is required. It tackles the recent debates on Roman trade and Roman economy providing original and convincing answers. The second part of the book is a selection of 14 of the author's published papers. They range from discussions of general topics such as the ideas of crisis and competition, the provisioning of Ancient Rome trade with the East to more specialized studies such as the interpretation of the 33 AD crisis. Overall the book contains a wealth of insights into the workings of ancient trade and expertly combines discussion of the material evidence especially of amphorae and wrecks with the prosopographical approach derived from epigraphic, papyrological and historical data.

Urban Craftsmen and Traders in the Roman World
Andrew Wilson, Miko Flohr, 2016-02-12 This volume featuring sixteen contributions from leading Roman historians and archaeologists sheds new light on approaches to the economic history of urban craftsmen and traders in the Roman world with a particular emphasis on the imperial period. Combining a wide range of research traditions from all over Europe and utilizing evidence from Italy, the western provinces and the Greek speaking east, this edited collection is divided into four sections. It first considers the scholarly history of Roman crafts and trade in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries focusing on Germany and the Anglo Saxon world and on Italy and France. Chapters discuss how scholarly thinking about Roman craftsmen and traders was influenced by historical and intellectual developments in the modern world and how different national research traditions followed different trajectories throughout the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. The second section highlights the economic strategies of craftsmen and traders examining strategies of long distance traders and the phenomenon of specialization and presenting case studies of leather working and bread baking. In the third section the human factor in urban crafts and trade including the role of apprenticeship, gender, freedmen and professional associations is analysed and the volume ends by exploring the position of crafts in urban space considering the evidence for artisanal clustering in the archaeological and papyrological record and providing case studies of the development of commercial Reframing the Roman Economy Dimitri Van Limbergen, Adeline Hoffelinck, Devi Taelman, 2022-11-17 This book focuses on those features of the Roman economy that are less traceable in text and archaeology and as a consequence remain largely underexplored in contemporary scholarship. By reincorporating for the first time these long obscured practices in mainstream scholarly discourses this book offers a more complete and balanced view of an economic system that for too long has mostly been studied through its macro economic and large scale and thus archaeologically and textually omnipresent aspects. The topic is approached in five thematic sections covering unusual actors and perspectives unusual places of production exigent landscapes of exploitation less visible products and artefacts and divergent views on emblematic economic spheres. To this purpose the book brings together a select group of leading scholars and promising early career researchers in archaeology and ancient economic history well positioned to steer this ill developed but fundamental field of the Roman economy in promising new directions.

Amphorae and the Roman Economy D. P. S. Peacock, D. F. Williams, 1991

The Economic Integration of Roman Italy Tymon C.A. de Haas, Gijs Tol, 2017-08-10 Over the past decades archaeological field surveys and excavations have greatly enriched our knowledge of the Roman countryside. Drawing on such new data the volume The Economic Integration of Roman Italy edited by Tymon de Haas and Gijs Tol presents a series of papers that explore the changes Rome's territorial and economic expansion brought about in the countryside of the Italian peninsula. By drawing on a variety of source materials e.g. pottery, settlement patterns, environmental data they shed light on the complexity of rural settlement and economies on the local, regional and supra regional scales. As such the volume contributes to a re-assessment of Roman economic history in light of concepts such as globalisation, integration, economic performance and growth.

Journal of Roman Archaeology, 2005

The Origins of the Roman Economy Gabriele Cifani, 2020 In this book Gabriele Cifani reconstructs the early economic history of Rome from the Iron Age to the early Republic. Bringing a multidisciplinary approach to the topic he argues that the early Roman economy was more diversified than has been previously acknowledged, going well beyond agriculture and pastoralism. Cifani bases his argument on a systematic review of archaeological evidence for production, trade and consumption. He posits that the existence of a network system based on cultural interaction, social mobility and trade connected Rome and central Tyrrhenian Italy to the Mediterranean Basin even in this early period of Rome's history. Moreover these trade and cultural links existed in parallel to regional diversified economies and institutions. Cifani's book thus offers new insights into the economic basis for the rise of Rome as well as the social structures of Mediterranean Iron Age societies.

The Economy of Pompeii Miko Flohr, Andrew Wilson, 2017 This book is the first to address from a variety of perspectives the economy of the Roman city of Pompeii. It uses archaeological and textual evidence to discuss topics as diverse as agriculture in the fertile plains at the foot of Mount Vesuvius, diet and health, manufacturing, urban investment, consumption, trade and money.

Space, Movement and the Economy in Roman Cities in Italy and Beyond Frank Vermeulen, Arjan Zuiderhoek, 2021-05-26 How were space and movement in Roman cities affected by economic life What can the study of Roman urban landscapes tell us about the nature of the Roman economy These are the central questions addressed in this volume While there exist many studies of Roman urban space and of the Roman economy rarely have the two topics been investigated together in a sustained fashion In this volume an international team of archaeologists and historians focuses explicitly on the economics of space and mobility in Roman Imperial cities in both Italy and the provinces east and west Employing many kinds of material and written evidence and a wide range of methodologies the contributors cast new light both on well known and on less explored sites With their direct focus on the everyday economic uses of urban spaces and the movements through them the contributors offer a fresh and innovative perspective on the workings of Roman urban economies and on the debates concerning space in the Roman world This volume will be of interest to archaeologists and historians both those studying the Greco Roman world and those focusing on urban economic space in other periods and places as well as to other scholars studying premodern urbanism and urban economies The Roman Agricultural Economy Alan Bowman, Andrew Wilson, 2013-05-30 This collection presents new analyses for the nature and scale of Roman agriculture It outlines the fundamental features of agricultural production through studying the documentary and archaeological evidence for the modes of land exploitation and the organisation development of and investment in this sector The Archaeology of the Roman Empire Ian Archibald Richmond, 1957
