Johnston, 1987 American Journal of Public Health, 2005 Strategies for Controlling Adolescent Drug Use J. Michael Polich, 1984 The purpose of this study is to evaluate the available evidence on the effectiveness of drug control measures and to recommend the most promising areas for future private and public programs to reduce the use of drugs by young people Illicit drug use is widespread among both adolescents and adults Programs to control it have employed three principal methods 1 enforcement

2 education and prevention 3 treatment and rehabilitation The first method involves laws and regulations designed to prohibit or restrict the use of illegal drugs The second method involves efforts to educate young people about the risks and consequences of drug use The third method involves providing treatment services for those who are addicted to drugs

of drug laws 2 treatment of chronic abusers and 3 prevention of initial drug use The authors find that while intensified law enforcement is not likely to reduce adolescent drug use and the benefits of expanded treatment remain uncertain prevention programs hold more promise The most encouraging evidence comes from the success of school based programs to prevent cigarette smoking which offer a strategy that may be adaptable to other drugs
