

HOW RED WINE IS MADE

WINE FOLLY

Harvest grapes

Harvesting grapes when it's harvest season is the best way to ensure the best quality wine. Generally speaking, the earlier grapes are harvested, the more fruit and flavor they will have.

Prepare grapes

Once you've got harvested grapes, you'll need to remove the stems and leaves. This is called destemming. Destemming is a process that removes the stems and leaves from the grapes to prevent them from getting stuck in the fermenter.

Press

After the fermentation process, the wine is then pressed to remove the skins and seeds for any remaining flavor.

Fermentation

During this process, yeast converts sugar into alcohol and carbon dioxide. The alcohol and carbon dioxide are then released through the skins and seeds of the grapes.

Add yeast

Yeast is a type of microorganism that converts sugar into alcohol and carbon dioxide. Yeast is added to the grapes to help them ferment.

Malolactic

Malolactic fermentation is a type of bacterial fermentation that converts malic acid into lactic acid. This process is often used to add more complexity to the wine.

Aging

After the wine has been fermented, it is then aged in barrels. This process involves the removal of the skins and seeds of the grapes to allow the wine to mature and develop its flavor.

Blending

After the wine has been aged, it is then blended. This process involves the removal of the skins and seeds of the grapes to allow the wine to mature and develop its flavor.

Bottle aging

After the wine has been blended, it is then bottle aged. This process involves the removal of the skins and seeds of the grapes to allow the wine to mature and develop its flavor.

Bottling

Bottling occurs with several steps to be taken. These steps include filtering, labeling, and sealing. These steps help to keep the wine fresh and prevent it from going bad.
