Smal Prophets ... By George Hutcheson. With the Text , 1657 Civil War Collectors' Price Guide , The History of the Confederate War, Its Causes and Its Conduct, Vol.2 (of 2) George Cary Eggleston, To be continue from Volume1 In the meantime great events were occurring which were in some respects more important in their bearing on the war than battles would have been In these events the war recognized itself and adapted itself to its conditions From the beginning the abolitionists had clamorously and ceaselessly demanded of Mr Lincoln that he should recognize the actual cause of the war by proclaiming freedom for the slaves at the South There was no doubt in anybody s mind that the war was simply the culmination of that irrepressible conflict between the systems and sentiments of free and slave labor which had constituted the burden of the country s history for nearly half a century If there had been no slavery there would have been no war It is true that a very large proportion of the Southern people regretted slavery deprecated its existence and earnestly desired to be rid of it It is also true that the great mass of the Southerners were non slaveholders and that their fighting was done not for the perpetuation of that institution in which they had no interest but in assertion of those reserved rights of the individual states upon the maintenance of which they sincerely believed that the liberty of the people depended These people desired to take their states out of the Union not for the sake of slavery but for the sake of that right of local self government which they regarded as the fundamental condition of liberty among men On the other hand a large proportion of the Northern people cared little or nothing about slavery many of them even approving the institution as the only practicable arrangement under which blacks and whites could live peaceably together and as a condition eminently proper for the incapable black man But these believed in the maintenance of the Union as a condition of liberty and progress and were ready to sacrifice their lives and their possessions in behalf of that end Nevertheless it was clear from the beginning that in the last analysis the war involved as its issue the maintenance of slavery or the destruction of that system root and branch Personally Mr Lincoln hated slavery and very earnestly desired its extermination But as he reminded those who beset him with unsolicited advice he was restrained by his oath of office while they were free to advocate any principle or policy that might seem good in their eyes Moreover he had upon him the tremendous task of preserving the Union and in aid of that supreme purpose he was ready to sacrifice all other considerations of what kind soever In answer to an impassioned appeal from Horace Greeley in August 1862 Mr Lincoln set forth his attitude in these words My paramount object is to save the Union and not either to save or destroy slavery If I could save the Union without freeing any slave I would do it If I could save it by freeing all the slaves I would do it And if I could do it by freeing some and leaving others alone I would also do that At the beginning Mr Lincoln had clearly seen the necessity of winning all the support he could to his war measures He had seen that while practically the whole population of the North would stand by him in a war for the preservation of the Union there must be a very great and dangerous defection should he make the war one for the extirpation of slavery in those states in which the institution existed under protection of the Federal Constitution By thus resolutely refusing to make the war a crusade against slavery and declaring as he did in his official utterances that it was no part of his purpose to interfere with the domestic institutions of any state Mr Lincoln had drawn to his support a vast body of influential citizens who would otherwise have opposed and whose influence was great enough perhaps if it had been offended to have robbed him of the means of restoring the disrupted Union Had he adopted the policy
