That Collison Woman:

Women and the White Man's God Myra Rutherdale, 2007-10 This book is a critical addition to scholarship in women's Canadian Native and religious studies and contributes to the growing Canadian and international literature on post colonialism and gender. Guerrillas and Combative Mothers Siphokazi Magadla, 2023-12-01 Guerrillas and Combative Mothers is a narrative of women participating in the armed struggle against apartheid from 1961 to 1994 and their lives in a democratic South Africa. Focusing on their agency, commitment, beliefs, and actions, it describes how women got politicised and the decisions and circumstances that led them to join the armed struggle in South Africa and exile. Siphokazi Magadla discusses the forms of military training they received, the combat activities, and their transformation as women and soldiers. Magadla also talks about their participation in the South African National Defence Force-led demobilisation process and their contributions to the democratic transformation of the SANDF. By illuminating the different eras and arenas of their participation, this book shows the broadness of the armed struggle against apartheid as a historical truth and as a matter of gender equality and justice for an inclusive and more democratic future.

Women's Bodies and Medical Science L. Bryder, 2017-10-20 An analysis of a scandal involving a doctor accused of allowing a number of women to develop cervical cancer from carcinoma in situ as part of an experiment he had been conducting since the 1960s into conservative treatment of the disease to more broadly explore dramatic changes in medical history in the second half of the twentieth century.

Sandra Coney, 1988 In 1984 the medical journal Obstetrics and Gynecology published a paper that would initiate an investigation into one of the greatest medical scandals of the late twentieth century. Titled The Invasive Potential of Carcinoma in Situ of the Cervix, it discussed the results of an experiment that had been run at the National Women's Hospital in Auckland, New Zealand, since 1955. The experiment looked at the natural history of cervical carcinoma in situ (CIS). In other words, what happens if no treatment is initiated in a condition suspected when the experiment began to lead to cervical cancer. The paper divided participants into two groups: one that had negative results after biopsy or treatment and one smaller group that continued to test positive. This second group had a significant rate of cervical cancer. Some of these women were followed for twenty-five years without treatment, and in only 5% did the disease spontaneously resolve. For the other

95% outcomes ranged from positive but localised results to metastatic disease and death The authors said these results were in contrast with other earlier papers about the experiment After much research Sandra Coney one time editor of a NZ feminist magazine and Phyllida Bunkle a women s studies lecturer wrote an article about the experiment exposing the unauthorised research performed by one prominent gynaecologist in support of his belief that CIS was not associated with cervical cancer Professor Herbert Green a physician of considerable influence and power throughout New Zealand persisted in his belief despite increasingly convincing proof of a progressive connection between the two conditions never sought permission from his patients or even told them what he was doing
