

In 1673 Sir William Temple met a French buyer who had purchased twenty horses in Ireland for the French army at from twenty to sixty pounds a-piece¹.

According to the historical evidence laid before the Royal Commission on Irish horse-breeding by Dr Michael Cox² it appears "that at a very early date much attention was devoted to horse-breeding in Ireland, and that a distinct type of animal was established in the country, the superiority of which is attributed to the importation from Spain of sires of Eastern origin"; whilst according to the information supplied to the same body by Mr Matthew Kenny the "old Irish mare" was small, clean legged and hardy, and the same authority holds that "this breed originated in the numerous Spanish stallions brought to Ireland in the sixteenth century. There was a regular trade between the south and west of Ireland and Spain for many centuries, Ireland exporting wool, hides, and butter, and receiving in return wine, cloth, horses, and specie. The class of Spanish horse introduced was the Andalusian Barb. To this element

Excerpt from The Origin and Influence of the Thoroughbred Horse The present work is an attempt to solve one of the chief problems in the history of the horse the most important the one not excepted of all animals domesticated by man The nature of the inquiry rendered it necessary to treat not only of all the chief breeds of domestic horses known in historical times but also to take a survey of all the other living Equidae as well as of the ancestors of the genus The question of coloration naturally holds a prominent place in the investigation and I have tried to trace historically the origin of the various colours found in domestic horses At the same time I have endeavoured to indicate though it must be confessed rather cursorily the influence exercised on the history of the chief nations of the ancient medieval and modern world by the possession of horses and especially by the acquisition of what I venture to term the Libyan horse I have also tried to point out the lessons of supreme importance to the breeder which can be learned from the contemplation of the injury wrought to breeds of great value by the ill judged and unscientific introduction of alien blood a practice in no small degree due to a lack of historical knowledge and to a general belief that all our domestic races of horses like those of tame pigeons have been obtained solely by artificial breeding from a single wild species I must add a few words respecting the method of writing zoological names and the transliteration of foreign words About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
