Sinistres Augures

Adolphe Thiers

Sinistres Augures:

Women Writers in Pre-revolutionary France Colette H. Winn, Donna Kuizenga, 1997 This extensive collection of English language essays examines the many strategies of resistance to male domination that women in France from the 16th through the 18th centuries utilized in their lives and their writings. Themes treated include women's views on marriage, religion, education, careers, tradition and narrative, and rhetorical innovation. The 28 essays cover such well known writers as Marguerite de Navarre and Madame de Charron, as well as unjustly neglected figures from Hélène de Crenne to Mme d'Aulnoy. Nearly all genres are discussed: novels, theater, short stories, poetry, textual commentary, letters, autobiography, and memoirs. While most essays focus on one writer, some deal with such topics as the development of a women's rhetoric, the association of letter writing with women, or the fairy tale, and all of the studies are informed by the various currents of feminist criticism.

The First Voyage Round the World by Magellan Antonio Pigafetta, Though Magellan's enterprise was the greatest ever undertaken by any navigator, yet he has been deprived of his due fame by the jealousy which has always existed between the two nations inhabiting the Peninsula: the Spaniards would not brook being commanded by a Portuguese, and the Portuguese have not yet forgiven Magellan for having abandoned them to serve Castile. But Magellan really had no choice for if the western passage which he expected to discover was to be sought for, it could only be under the auspices of Spain, within whose demarcation those waters lay. It would seem that D. Manuel had only himself to blame for the loss of Magellan's services, and as M. Amoretti well observes, D. Manuel ought to have been well aware of the value of those services, since Charles V knew it and showed his appreciation of them. It is difficult to believe that the injury of which Magellan complained and which led him to seek other service was merely as Osorio says, the refusal of promotion in palace rank, and which he had well deserved especially since the motive ascribed by Osorio to the king's refusal, namely the necessity of avoiding a bad precedent, was not alone a sufficient affront to account for Magellan's sacrificing all his hopes and property in his own country; had he not also felt that the king was condemning him to inaction, obscurity, and uselessness? Barros indeed says that The favours of princes given for services are a retributive justice which must be observed equally with all, with regard to the quality of each man, and that if a man's portion be denied him though he endures it ill, yet he will have patience; but if he see the advancement of those who have profited more by artifice and friends than by their own merits, he loses all patience, indignation, hatred, and despair arise, and he will commit faults injurious to himself and others. And what outraged Magellan more than the refusal of the half ducat a month was that some men who were with him at Azamor said that his lameness was feigned to support his petition. The king moreover refused to receive Magellan and showed his ill will against him. It is therefore highly probable that before Magellan took the step of leaving Portugal, D. Manuel, prompted by his niggardly disposition, had refused to entertain Magellan's desire for employment at sea or his projects of discovery, from which no immediate profit was to be expected. This is apparent from the statement of Barros, Decad. iii, lib. v, cap. viii, that letters of Magellan to Francisco Serrano were found after the death of the latter in Maluco in which Magellan said that he should soon see him and if it were not by way of Portugal it would be by way of Castile and that Serrano should therefore wait for him there Further on Barros says that recourse to Castile appears from these letters to have been in Magellan's mind some time before the occurrence of the king's dismissal of his business and that this was shown by his always associating with pilots and occupying himself with sea charts
