Zagoria,2015-12-08 What happens if the two most powerful partners in the Communist world cannot agree on basic issues of principle and policy Donald S Zagoria who was from 1951 to 1961 an analyst of Communist Bloc politics for the U S Government traces the development of serious conflict between the U S S R and China from the 20th Party Congress in 1956 to the 22nd Party Congress in late 1961 This conflict has enveloped three major areas global strategy domestic policy and intra Bloc relations and has plagued the relations between Khrushchev and Mao Tse tung and affected their differing attitudes toward de Stalinization the communes Yugoslavia Taiwan and the developing African and Asian nations In studying these differing policies Mr Zagoria makes extensive use of the published statements of the Chinese and Russian Communists his analysis of this literature is in itself an important contribution to all future evaluations of Communist intentions Originally published in 1962 The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print on demand technology to again make available previously out of print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905    Sino-Soviet Conflict Donald S. Committee on Foreign Affairs. Subcommittee on the Far East and the Pacific,1965    Sino-Soviet Conflict, Report ... by the Subcommittee on the Far East and the Pacific ... Together with Hearings Held March 10-31, 1965 United States. Congress. House. Foreign Affairs,1965    Sino-Soviet Conflict ,1985    The Sino-Soviet Border War of 1969 Dmitry Ryabushkin, Harold Steven Orenstein,2021 The victory of the communists in the Chinese civil war resulted in the formation of a new socialist state in Asia the People s Republic of China PRC The Soviet leadership was the first to recognize the PRC and subsequently provided China with considerable economic scientific and military assistance After Stalin s death however relations between Moscow and Peking began to rapidly deteriorate the main reasons being the disagreements regarding Stalin's legacy and the principles of co-existence with capitalist states. With the beginning of the so-called Cultural Revolution in the PRC these disagreements intensified the two sides in the ideological conflict accused each other of revisionism, dogmatism and nationalism. Economic failures and social chaos forced the PRC leadership, first and foremost Mao Zedong personally, to seek a method for divesting itself of the responsibility for what had taken place. As a solution they organized a military conflict on the border with the Soviet Union, one that was adequate enough to mobilize and rally the people around the PRC leadership while at the same time insignificant enough in scale to prevent it from escalating into a full-fledged war. On 2 March 1969 a specially prepared Chinese army detachment made a surprise attack on the Soviet border guards who were patrolling the border sector in the area of Damansky Island on the Ussuri River. In the subsequent battle the dead alone on both sides numbered more than 50. Two weeks later on 15 March 1969 a much larger battle took place in this same area in which the two sides used artillery and armored vehicles; the casualties numbered in the hundreds. There were conflicts along the entire Sino-Soviet border from Primorye to Central Asia in the following weeks and months. Although smaller in scale than the Damansky events, men still died in them. Shooting on Damansky continued practically into mid-September. On 13 August 1969 there occurred one more large-scale military clash in the area of Lake Zhalanashkol, after which the political leadership of the USSR and PRC recognized the very real possibility that the border war might escalate into a full-scale war with the potential use of nuclear weapons. The first volume of this two-part mini-series examines, among other things, the historical and political precursors of the 1969 events, the reaction to them in different countries, and the battle of 2 March 1969. Principal attention is focused on a detailed chronological description of the battle, Soviet and Chinese tactics and the weapons used. Inasmuch as the present state policies in Russia and China are aimed not only at keeping silent about the 1969 events but also opposing any attempts to study what happened in detail, the authors have relied on finding veterans of the battles and obtaining from them documentary evidence of those distant events. The authors believe that this study is the most detailed and objective work on the theme of the 1969 Sino-Soviet border war.
