Situating The Self:

Situating the Self Seyla Benhabib, 2013-05-28 Focusing on contemporary debates in moral and political theory Situating the Self argues that a non relative ethics binding on us in virtue of our humanity is still a philosophically viable project This interesting new book should be read by all those concerned with the problems of critical theory the analysis of modernity and contemporary ethics as well as students and professionals in philosophy sociology and political science

On Feminist Ethics and Politics Claudia Card, 1999 For years mainstream feminist ethics focused criticism on male supremacy Feminist philosophers in this volume adopt a less male focused stance to look closely at oppression's impact on women's agency and on women's relations with women Examining legal social and physical relationships these philosophers confront moral ambiguity moral compromise and complicity in perpetuating oppression Combining personal experience with philosophical inquiry they vividly portray their daily engagement with oppression as both victims and perpetrators They explore such issues as how pornography silences women and radical feminist politics complicity in racism Among these insightful essays Sandra Bartky argues that women share guilt for racism when they benefit from it without protest Susan Brison reflects on uses of narrative in trauma recovery from such experiences as being targeted for rape or murder Joan Callahan examines fallout of derogatory speech directed at lesbians Virginia Held proposes carrying care into marketplaces and governments and in her introduction Claudia Card draws on Primo Levi's conception of gray zones in exploring dangers of character damage to victims of misogyny A fitting companion to Card's highly regarded Feminist Ethics this volume interweaves observations on character political ethics violence and love into an accessible sourcebook for students It tackles some of feminism's most pressing issues and helps readers to identify and then overcome the real damage caused by oppression and journalists transformed and shaped the development landscape in eastern and southern Africa Whereas practical experiences are crucial assets and resources for shaping the academic environment and development practice landscape most of the existing literature recommended as key learning materials in tertiary institutions is rarely in synch with the practical realities of development practice The shared individual lived experiences from academic endeavours and fieldwork provide hands on tools for students and emerging practitioners who might be involved in or are currently facilitating development work The thrust of the book therefore is to demystify the day to day experiences of development practitioners while contributing to learning pathways or strategies for achieving viable solutions to the myriad of challenges which grassroots communities face The relevance of the book as a crucial resource for students pursuing development oriented degree programmes in colleges and universities is obvious Without any doubt the compilation will be handy in the implementation of diverse development oriented transformation agenda at academic programming and policy levels

Renaissance Talk Stanley Stewart, 1997 Proceeding on the assumption that confusion in Renaissance criticism arises from the way we talk and the vocabularies we use Stewart investigates typical assertions in recent criticism of Spenser Shakespeare Donne and Herbert using a Wittgensteinian method of investigation This involves taking a thing usually a statement apart If a statement under such scrutiny seems to make no sense or to lead critics into blind alleys then we must try to clarify the expression As Stewart asserts if we are to go on together in critical conversation then we must find a way to sort out the confusion that arises from our language While Wittgenstein's thought has long been utilized by literary critics this study represents the first sustained application of ordinary language philosophy to the vocabulary and assumptions of current criticism This study is an original and important book one likely to be of great interest to philosophers as well as literary theorists While Renaissance Talk is primarily concerned with Renaissance and early modern studies its patient but relentless exposure of what sometimes passes for scholarly criticism along with its exemplary corrective explication of misinterpreted passages from the writings of major authors makes it useful reading for a wide range of Literary Studies students and scholars about Science and the Ideal ... Addison M. Bourland, 1893      The Eagle ,1893      The Subject and the Self Michel Tort, Susan Fairfield, 1996-11 What makes Lacan so difficult for Americans to understand and what makes Lacanians so suspect of American psychoanalysis This work brings together some of the most prominent psychoanalysts in France and America today to address a range of different topics      Narrative Inquiry ,2001      History of Monroe and Shelby Counties, Missouri ,1884      European Literary Theory and Practice Vernon W. Gras, 1973      Rediscovering the Democratic Purposes of Education Lorraine McDonnell, P. Michael Timpane, Roger W. Benjamin, 2000 Why do America's public schools seem unable to meet today's social challenges As competing interest groups vie over issues like funding and curricula we seem to have lost sight of the democratic purposes originally intended for public education Public schools were envisioned by the Founders as democratically run institutions for instilling civic values but today's education system seems more concerned with producing good employees than good citizens Meanwhile our country's diversity has eroded consensus about citizenship and the professionalization of educators has diminished public involvement in schools This volume seeks to demonstrate that the democratic purposes of education are not outmoded ideas but can continue to be driving forces in public education Nine original articles by some of today's leading education theorists cut a broad swath across the political spectrum to examine how those democratic purposes might be redefined and revived It both establishes the intellectual foundation for revitalizing American schools and offers concrete ideas for how the educational process can be made more democratic The authors make a case for better empirical research about the politics of education in order to both reconnect schools to their communities and help educators instill citizenship An initial series of articles reexamines the original premise of American education as articulated by important thinkers like Jefferson and Dewey A second group identifies flaws in how schools are currently governed and offers models for change A final section analyzes the value conflicts posed by the twin strands of democratic socialization and governance and their implications for education policy Spanning philosophy history sociology and political science this book brings together the best current thinking about the specifics of education policy vouchers charter schools national testing and about the role of deliberation in a democracy It offers a cogent alternative to the exchange paradigm and shows how much more needs to be understood about an issue so vital to America's future
