Many new and fruitful avenues of investigation open up when scholars consider forgery as a creative act rather than a crime. We invited authors to contribute work without imposing any restrictions beyond a willingness to consider new approaches to the subject of ancient fakes, forgeries, and questions of authenticity. The result is this volume in which our aim is to display some of the many possibilities available to scholarship. The exposure of fraud and the pursuit of truth may still be valid scholarly goals, but they implicitly demand that we confront the status of any text as a focal point for matters of belief and conviction. Recent approaches to forgery have begun to ask new questions, some intended purely for the sake of debate. Ought we to consider any author to have some inherent authenticity that precludes the possibility of a forger's successful parody? If every fake text has a real context, what can be learned about the cultural circumstances which give rise to forgeries? If every real text can potentially engender a parallel history of fakes, what can this alternative narrative teach us? What epistemological prejudices can lead us to swear a fake is genuine or dismiss the real thing as inauthentic? Following Splendide Mendax and Animo Decipiendi, this is the latest installment of an ongoing inquiry conducted by scholars in numerous countries into how the ancient world, its literature and culture, its history and art appears when viewed through the lens of fakes and forgeries, sincerities and authenticities, genuine signatures and pseudepigrapha. How does scholarship tell the truth if evidence doesn't? But fabula docet. The falsum does not simply make the great annoying stone before the door of the truth; otherwise, this here would really be a council of antiquarians and paleographers. The falsum makes a delicate fine tissue. It allows the verum to shine through in nuances and reliefs that were less noticeable without its counterpart really tied at the head. And treated, differentiated, it becomes even itself. perlucidum shines out with hidden values.

Disclosure: Due to the surveillance and censorship that are the computer and phone hacking and buggings, monitoring all online and real-life activities followed by phishing and counterfeit profiles, the author built online accounts, profiles, and blogs to identify how the counterfeits deploy technologies to craft or inoculate symptoms to the information stuff material. The fraud concerns accepting the unscientific and fraudulent approaches that cannot be questioned. Research from the cognitive sciences shows that the human mind doesn't have a particular region that deals with God or deities, and it doesn't have an inborn religious circuit. Continuing PNAS research shows the fact that religions aren't scientifically different and that economy, politics, and ideology are involved in the process of their ideological beliefs. Similarly, using advanced tools wouldn't work in constructing religious belief networks in the human mind and hence count as the extreme examples of torture. An example of censorship and medical fraud concerns the author's YouTube Playlists, particularly the atheist lectures. The fallacies of false equivalence is when the names of the scholars in these videos, their clothes, and the dominant colors in the accounts and so forth are deployed to demonically convert or falsely map the atheist consciences into
