The Cornell Journal of Architecture Caroline O'Donnell, Melissa Constantine, Matt Eshleman, 2011 An essential collection of illustrated texts regarding the reiterative in architecture and design today The Cornell Journal of Architecture Cornell Department of Architecture Staff, 1996-06 Cornell Journal of Architecture 12 Val Warke, Hallie Black, Todd Petrie, 2022-03-15 Organized around a timeline that demonstrates the range of presents and afters we find ourselves contemplating this volume of the Cornell Journal of Architecture considers our terrestrial occupations from a variety of real and imagined perspectives from the prehistoric to the future imperfect It seems that with increased urgency we are more frequently finding ourselves grasping for an after especially as we face futures with apprehension After exists at different scales of time and context there s after an instant after a day after an era And each after contains both a conclusion and a beginning This volume of the Cornell Journal of Architecture looks at a vast range of the afters we architects find ourselves confronting and offers not just warnings but solutions not just reminders but projections Because while we humans are obliged to stand squarely within the present as architects we re equally obliged to cast our work into a hereafter that can be only loosely understood And then we can hope that in the aftermath our intentions bear some resemblance to their consequences With Contributions of a vast selection of architects artists designers historians and geoscientists including Peter van Assche James Biber Olalekan Jeyifous Michael Murphy with Jha D Williams Felix Heisel Jacques Ferrier Common Accounts Meredith Miller and T E A M and many others representing an extensive diversity of approaches for identifying techniques of transcending pasts and presents The Cornell Journal of Architecture D. Department of Architecture, 1988 Cornell Journal of Architecture 11 Hallie Black, 2020-02-21 Anthropologists tell us that fear is an innate trait among most primate species a principal aspect of learning to survive At the same time most of us primates seem equally adept at learning new fears fears that are perhaps irrational and non productive and frequently enflamed by manipulative parties among our own species Oddly despite our theme this may prove to be the most optimistic Cornell Journal of all An awareness of fear has been known to inspire invention imagination and substantial change Is the opposite of fearful fearlessness perhaps a form of belligerence or ignorance or is it found in determination or courage or is it perhaps a type of calm or of knowledge Herein are some attempts at dispelling some of these fears Urban
