The Hall And The Grange:

The Hall and the Grange: A Novel Archibald Marshall, 2020-09-28 Colonel Eldridge was enjoying an afternoon doze or a series of dozes in the Sabbath peace of his garden His enjoyment was positive for he had a prejudice against sleeping in the day time and sat upright in his basket chair with no support to his head so that when sleep began to overtake him he nodded heavily and woke up again If he had provided himself with a cushion from one of the chairs or lounges by his side he would have slumbered blissfully but would have been lost to the charm of his surroundings These included a great expanse of lawn mown and rolled and tended to a sheeny perfection of soft rich colour the deep shade of nobly branching trees in their dark dress of mid July bright flower beds the terraced front of a squarely built stone house of a comfortably established age These were for the eye to rest upon after one of those heavy nods and to carry their message of spacious seclusion and domestic well being For the other senses there were messages that conveyed the same meaning the hot brooding peace of the July afternoon tempered by the soft stirring of flower scented breezes the drone of bees and of insects less usefully employed the occasional sweet pipe of birds still mindful of earlier courtships the grateful and secure absence of less mundane sounds The house was empty except for servants who obtruded themselves neither on sight nor hearing The tennis net on the levelled space by the rose garden hung in idle curves Colonel Eldridge had the whole wide verdurous garden to himself and the house too if he cared to enter it Though he liked to have his family around him as a general rule he found it pleasant to keep his own company thus for an hour or so He was just approaching the time when one of those droops which punctuated his light slumbers would wake him up to a more lively sense of well being and he would take up the book that lay on his knee when his half closed eyes took in a figure emerging from the trees among which the lawn lost itself at the lower end of the garden He aroused himself and waved a welcoming hand which meant among other things Here you have a wide awake man reading a book on Sunday afternoon but you need not be afraid of disturbing him The grateful lassitude however which enveloped his frame prevented his rising to greet his brother who came towards him with an answering wave of the hand and took a seat by his side There was not much difference in the age of the two brothers which was somewhere in the fifties In appearance also they were something alike of the same height and build and with the same air of wearing their years well Colonel Eldridge had the military caste impressed upon him with closely cropped hair underneath his straw hat small grey moustache and a little net work of wrinkles about his keen blue eyes His clothes were neat and unobtrusive as of a man who gets the best tailoring and leaves it at that Sir William Eldridge also quite obviously got the best tailoring He wore a suit of soft brown with boots polished to an enviable pitch the narrow sleeves of his jacket ornamented with four buttons showed the doubled over cuffs of his blue flannel shirt fastened with enamelled links a gay bandana tie heightened the agreeable contrast of blue and brown his soft felt hat was of light grey with a black band With a new pair of chamois leather gloves he would have been beautifully dressed for any occasion that did not demand a silk hat and whatever should go with it But he wore or carried no gloves for a walk of half a mile across the fields by the river from Hayslope Grange where he lived to Hayslope Hall his brother's house The Hall and the Grange Archibald Marshall, 2020-08-15 Reproduction of the original The Hall and the Grange by Archibald Marshall The Hall and the Grange a Novel Marshall Archibald, 2016-06-23 Unlike some other reproductions of classic texts 1 We have not used OCR Optical Character Recognition as this leads to bad quality books with introduced typos 2 In books where there are images such as portraits maps sketches etc We have endeavoured to keep the quality of these images so they represent accurately the original artefact Although occasionally there may be certain imperfections with these old texts we feel they deserve to be made available for future generations to enjoy The Hall and the Grange Archibald Marshall, 2017-05-09 The Hall and the Grange Journal of Proceedings of the National Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry National Grange, 1883 *Journal of Proceedings of the ...
