Durham, William Durham, 2025-12-10 The Social Causes of Environmental Destruction in Latin America is a timely examination of critical cases of land degradation deforestation and resource depletion in Central and South America The contributors seasoned researchers with years of experience in the regions they discuss convincingly document the idea that the causes of environmental destruction have their origins in social relations specifically the dynamics of social classes with fundamentally divergent interests The conditions facing impoverished families on the one hand and the granting of land on a concessionary basis to powerful individuals and corporations on the other create incentives to extensive land use without conservation The book thus refutes simplistic arguments that address environmental destruction as an outcome of population growth and suggests that advocacy for social equity is not merely an idealistic quest but an ecological imperative This book is essential reading for anyone interested in development issues and should appeal particularly to anthropologists sociologists economists demographers and geographers Terug naar Macondo Arij Ouweneel, 2007 The European Tradition in Qualitative Research Raymond Boudon, Mohamed Cherkaoui, Pierre Demeulenaere, 2003 This text provides a comprehensive and authoritative survey of the European tradition of qualitative research The editors define qualitative to refer to a broad range of procedures and operations used by sociologists and anthropologists in their interpretation and explanation of social and ethnographic data The Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute , 2002 Articles on all aspects of anthropology United States Political Science Documents , 1976 Between Frontiers Noboru Ishikawa, 2010 UNITED STATES POLITICAL SCIENCE DOCUMENTS VOLUME ONE 1975 , 1976 Ethnology , 1980 Human Resource Development Nat J.
