While the main characters of this book apparently are ghosts, foxes, immortals, and demons, Pu Songling is more focused on the real life of commoners. Four main themes run throughout the book. The first is the author's complaint with the existing feudal system, which he finds to be unjust and skewed towards the elite. Secondly, the author is concerned with the corruption that exists in the Imperial examination system Thirdly the author shows his admiration of pure faithful love between poor scholars and powerless women And lastly is the overarching theme of morality for which Pu Songling intended Strange Tales from a Chinese Studio to be instructive towards bettering This work of classical Chinese literature is translated here by Herbert A Giles
