Dire Straits Indo Skosana, 2021-03-31 Innovative and classic at the same time Indo Skosana's poetry is a unique and melodious contrast between modern and old practical and spiritual logical and instinctual Philosophy history love as well as taxes environmental issues and politics the complexity of the world we inhabit is captured in a dissonant harmony capable of merging the immaterial and material aspects of life Rather than having all the answers or presuming to capture a universal truth Indo Skosana describes the beautiful and sometimes painful contradictions of the reality that surrounds us then invites the readers to ask themselves numerous questions But among the chaos unpredictability and hardships of life one message stands clear as a beacon towering above a dark and tumultuous ocean we should always live no matter what and we should do so by helping each other and by creating a true sincere connection with the people and the nature we share our existence with In this torn frenetic and wonderful world we live in individuals have a chance to reach the awareness of being part of something wider more complex and beautiful than what defines their own singularity We are one Life first All shall follow Indo Skosana is a South African poet and writer After attending Sizwakele Secondary School in Embalenhle he studied English Literature at Intec College in Cape Town and graduated in 1994 He worked as a Publicity Officer at Statistics South Africa and later as a Civic Education Facilitator for the Independent Election Commission I E C Some of his poems were published by the Poetry Institute of Africa based in Durban others are catalogued at the National English Literature Museum at Grahamstown University One poem I Won't Tarnish Your Image has been published by the South African Human Rights Commission

Straits Kenneth Koch, 1998 Kenneth Koch continues to expand the range of what is possible to do in poetry His title poem is a stirring collection of disconnected and connected sentences on such themes as love politics and the exploration of sub polar seas Vous etes plus beaux que vous ne pensiez is a series of bright rapid sketches of the lives of ten artists and writers Writing in a variant of the style of the eighteenth century poet James Thomson Koch revives an old genre praise of the seasons with his own characteristic mixture of clarity and sensuous excitement A group of twenty five poems called Songs from the Plays creates a new genre songs written for plays that don't exist but from which plays might be imagined or constructed My Olivetti Speaks is perhaps Koch's clearest and wittiest meditation on the nature of poetry itself The themes of time and change in individual lives are given an unusual look in Study of Time and the Villon like Ballade
