The Ming Tribute Grain System:

The Ming Tribute Grain System Ayao Hoshi, 1981-01-30 A Reconstruction of the Ming tribute grain system from varying fields of investigation      China's Second Capital - Nanjing under the Ming, 1368-1644 Jun Fang, 2014-05-23 This book is a study of the dual capital system of Ming dynasty China 1368 1644 with a focus on the administrative functions of the auxiliary Southern Capital Nanjing It argues that the immense geographical expanse of the Chinese empire and the poor communication infrastructure of pre modern times necessitated the establishment of an additional capital administration for effective control of the Ming realm The existence of the Southern Capital which has been dismissed by scholars as redundant and insignificant was the author argues justified by its ability to assist the primary Northern Capital better control the southern part of the imperial land The practice of maintaining auxiliary capitals where the bureaucratic structures of the primary capital were replicated in varying degrees was a unique and valuable approach to effecting bureaucratic control over vast territory in pre modern conditions Nanjing translates into English as Southern Capital and Beijing as Northern Capital

The Ming Tribute Grain System Bosji Ayao, 1969      Speaking of Profit William T. Rowe, 2020-10-26 In the first half of the nineteenth century the Qing Empire faced a crisis It was broadly perceived both inside and outside of government that the prosperous age of the eighteenth century was over Bureaucratic corruption and malaise population pressure and food shortages ecological and infrastructural decay domestic and frontier rebellion adverse balances of trade and eventually a previously inconceivable foreign threat from the West seemed to present hopelessly daunting challenges This study uses the literati reformer Bao Shichen as a prism to understand contemporary perceptions of and proposed solutions to this general crisis Though Bao only briefly and inconsequentially served in office himself he was widely recognized as an expert on each of these matters and his advice was regularly sought by reform minded administrators From examination of his thought on bureaucratic and fiscal restructuring agricultural improvement the grain tribute administration the salt monopoly monetary policy and foreign relations Bao emerges as a consistent advocate of the hard nosed pursuit of material profit in the interests not only of the rural populace but also of the Chinese state and nation anticipating the arguments of self strengthening reformers later in the century      The Cambridge History of China Denis Crispin Twitchett, John King Fairbank, 1978

International scholars and sinologists discuss culture economic growth social change political processes and foreign influences in China since the earliest pre dynastic period      Transport in Transition Andrew Watson, 1972-01-01 Water transport is a major feature of the traditional Chinese economy because of its magnitude and comparative efficiency Yet this feature has all too often been ignored by scholars with the notable exception of Japanese scholars We cannot hope to gain any real conception of how the Chinese economy worked in the past or works now until we have a clearer picture of the circulation of men and commodities In this circulation water transport has been and is of crucial importance Transport in Transition collects and translates notable Japanese articles to throw some light on the evolution of traditional junk shipping during a key transitional phase 1900-1940 when it was absorbing the influences of various forms of modernization and on the eve of its major organizational transformation under the direction of the Communist Party. The articles chosen concentrate on two main themes: the institutional organization of the shipping business and the forms of ownership and operation. They will be of value to business historians and economic sociologists generally as well as to economic historians interested in transport. Several features of the Chinese economy are sharply illuminated. Most striking is the extent of regional variation. North and central Chinese shipping are shown to have differed both in their methods of operation and organization. Also noteworthy is the enduring strength of some traditional features of shipping operation and business practice. An unexpected feature of this endurance was the strength of traditional shipping in the face of steady competition from all forms of modern transport and from reputedly more efficient forms of business management. The Ming Tribute Grain System.

Scholars of China, 1992. This Handbook leads to a wealth of bibliographical and biographical information about more than 1,500 20th century Japanese scholars of China. Offers accurate readings of scholars' names, short characterizations of their areas of specialization, and indexes references to them in four other volumes. It includes as many bibliographies as possible of the work of individual Japanese China scholars and includes hundreds of Japanese language books and articles about them as well as Festschriften dedicated to them. Pays special attention to English and other Western language material about their scholarship, book-length translations, book reviews, and summaries. As numerous scholars included in the Handbook are of importance to the study of Japan, Korea, and other parts of Asia, the volume will benefit students of these areas as well.
