Superportraits Gillian Rhodes, 1997-02-28 As Nixon's unpopularity increased during Watergate his nose and jowls grew to impossible proportions in published caricatures Yet the caricatures remained instantly recognizable Caricatures can even be superportraits with the paradoxical quality of being more like the face than the face itself How can we recognize such distorted images Do caricatures derive their power from some special property of a face recognition system or from some more general property of recognition systems What kind of mental representations and recognition processes make caricatures so effective What can the power of caricatures tell us about recognition In seeking to answer these questions the author assembles clues from a variety of sources the invention and development of caricatures by artists the exploitation of extreme signals in animal communication systems and studies of how humans other animals and connectionist recognition systems respond to caricatures Several conclusions emerge The power of caricatures is ubiquitous Caricatures can be superportraits for humans other animals and computer recognition systems They are effective for a variety of stimuli not just faces They are effective whether objects are mentally represented as deviations from a norm or average member of the class or as absolute feature values on a set of dimensions Exaggeration of crucial norm deviation features distinctiveness and resemblance to caricatured memory traces are all potential sources of the power of caricature Superportraits will be of interest to students of cognitive psychology perception the visual arts and animal behavior Perception, 2009 Facial Attractiveness Gillian Rhodes, Leslie Zebrowitz, 2002 Annotation Using evolutionary cognitive and social psychology this book explores the controversial issue of facial attractiveness New Zealand Journal of Psychology, 1992 Annual Review of Psychology Individuals, Review Annual, 2005-02 Twenty three articles synthesize a year's worth of psychological research and provide portraits of the current state of the field in different topical areas Presented by Fiske Princeton U Schacter Harvard U and Kazdin Yale U the articles cover such research topics as decision making models of brain function in neuroimaging music perc Specificity Recognition and Social Cognition László Tarnay, Tamás Pólya, 2004 Mainstream cognitive science claims that the essence of human cognition is its capacity to categorize the world into stones trees friends and foes elements that form more or less homogeneous groups But it has seldom been asked how individual entities like one's father or a work of art are in their uniqueness or specificity represented mentally if at all This book tackles that problem by surveying data and theories coming from various fields such as evolutionary biology psychology neurology and philosophy and fitting them into a coherent new theoretical framework of a broadly anti representationalist ilk In order to construct the framework the authors introduce a series of new notions reshape or interpret many already in currency such as affordances categories misrepresentation conceptual and non conceptual content aspect seeing the analog digital distinction and the evolutionary adaptivity of art and formulate five criteria on the basis of which what is and what is not mentally represented can clearly be told apart The book will be of interest to cognitive scientists in general International Bibliography of
