Exporting American Architecture 1870-2000 Jeffrey W. Cody,2005-06-27 The export of American architecture began in the nineteenth century as a disjointed set of personal adventures and commercial initiatives It continues today alongside the transfer of other aspects of American life and culture to most regions of the world Jeffrey Cody explains how why and where American architects planners building contractors and other actors have marketed American architecture overseas In so doing he provides a historical perspective on the diffusion of American building technologies architectural standards construction methods and planning paradigms Using previously undocumented examples and illustrations he shows how steel frame manufacturers shipped their products abroad enabling the erection of American style skyscrapers worldwide by 1900 and how this phase was followed by similar initiatives by companies manufacturing concrete components

Campsteading Derek Brereton,2017-09-25 The campstead is an American institution After the Civil War with neo colonialism environmentalism and arts and crafts on the rise some families sought rural locations for rustic camps There they raised their children in the summertime Around Squam Lake after some eight generations twenty one such camps remain in these families The Squam area thus becomes a natural place to study relationships of persons and places families and landscape and humans and the world Our present concerns for environmental stewardship open space protection and core values instead of consumerism make this a good time to revisit the simple American Campstead Rustic camping itself revisited aspects of the American frontier Just as the western frontier was disappearing some families resorted to remnants of the first frontier among mountains and lakes of the Northeast Through campsteads these families preserved elements of the frontier ethos Campsteads facilitate particular experiences involving nature and family Brereton investigates campstead experience and through it the nature of human experience generally This book is the first detailed account of campsteading the first application of critical realism in anthropology and the first anthropological use of John Dewey's evolutionary model

Globalization and Institutions Marie-Laure Djelic, Sigrid

Quack, 2003 This volume investigates the relationship between economic globalization and institutions or global governance challenging the common assumption that globalization and institutionalization are essentially processes which exclude each other Instead the contributors to this book show that globalization is better perceived as a dual process of institutional change at the national level and institution building at the transnational level Rich supporting empirical evidence is provided along with a theoretical conceptualization of the main actors mechanisms and conditions involved in trickle up and trickle down trajectories through which national institutional systems are being transformed and transnational rules emerge The book collectively argues that transnational institution building is one of the most striking features of the current period of internationalization As a consequence debates concerning globalization and global governance have to be reformulated The authors posit that globalization is not threatening governance but in fact globalization reflects a particular type of governance The dilemma therefore is not between globalization and institutions but between different meanings of governance and the balance that should be reached between them Globalization and Institutions will be of special interest to academics and scholars of institutional economics globalization and management However with its focus on two key debates for which there is clearly rising interest many social scientists will find the book of interest
