

Documentary Research Strategy to Research Canada

Documentary Research: Ethnographic ethnography	1. Research aims Documentary Research aims to explore and understand the experiences of individuals and groups in a particular social context. This is achieved through the collection and analysis of documents, which are defined as any written or recorded material that provides information about a particular topic or issue. This can include a wide range of materials, from official records and government documents to personal letters and diaries. The aim of Documentary Research is to use these documents to gain a deeper understanding of the social and cultural context in which they were produced and to explore the ways in which they have been used and interpreted over time. 2. Research design Documentary Research is a qualitative research method that involves the collection and analysis of documents. The design of the research is determined by the research aims and the types of documents that are available. This can involve a range of techniques, from archival research to the use of digital technologies to access online documents. The design should also take into account the ethical considerations of working with documents, such as ensuring that the data is anonymized and that the rights of the individuals involved are protected. 3. Data collection The data collection process in Documentary Research involves the identification and location of relevant documents. This can be done through a variety of methods, including searching archives, libraries, and online databases. Once the documents have been located, they are then collected and organized into a structured format for analysis. This may involve transcribing the documents or creating a database of the key information contained within them. 4. Data analysis The data analysis process in Documentary Research involves the interpretation and synthesis of the information contained within the documents. This is typically done through a process of thematic analysis, where the researcher identifies key themes or topics that emerge from the data. This can involve a range of techniques, from content analysis to the use of grounded theory. The aim is to develop a coherent and meaningful interpretation of the data that addresses the research aims. 5. Research findings The research findings in Documentary Research are typically presented in the form of a written report or a series of articles. These findings should be based on a thorough and systematic analysis of the documents and should provide a clear and concise summary of the key themes and issues identified. The findings should also be supported by relevant evidence from the documents and should be presented in a way that is accessible and understandable to the reader.
Documentary Research: Ethnographic ethnography	6. Research limitations Documentary Research has several limitations. One of the main limitations is the potential for bias in the selection and interpretation of documents. This can occur if the researcher only focuses on documents that confirm their preconceptions or if they interpret the documents in a way that is influenced by their own biases. Another limitation is the potential for incomplete data, as not all relevant documents may be available or accessible. Finally, Documentary Research is often a time-consuming and costly process, as it can involve a lot of searching and analysis of large volumes of documents.
