Introducing Electronic Supply Chain Collaboration in China Thomas Christian Fendt, 2010 The Effect of a Third-Party Facilitator on Supply Chain Collaboration Reeru Guha, Tom Slabbers, Ioannis Fragkos, Emmanouil Avgerinos, Rob Zuidwijk, 2022 Effective collaboration among supply chain actors can lead to improved market access reduced logistics costs and improved customer service In practice however widespread collaboration initiatives are challenging to implement due to barriers such as the sharing of sensitive information coordination complexity and the lack of trust and operational visibility The impact of such barriers may be mitigated by a third party facilitator an organization that facilitates coordination between actors negotiates execution level details and safeguards sensitive information We assess the impact of such a facilitator on supply chain collaboration We further investigate whether such a facilitator may induce a positive second order effect on environmental impact and logistics costs through improving collaboration We test our hypotheses using survey interviews and multiple case studies on member organizations of Connekt a non profit logistics facilitator Our results suggest that the existence of a third party facilitator in supply chains increases the number of collaborations We also find evidence that collaboration leads to reduction of supply chain costs and partial support that collaboration is associated with positive environmental impact Overall our study sheds light on the role of a third party facilitator in supply chain collaboration its contribution to reducing supply chain costs and improving the associated environmental footprint Online Appendix <http://ssrn.com/abstract/4284668>

empirical studies in risk management strategies This study is thus developed to address these gaps Drawn on the Theory of Swift Even Flow and the relational view this study proposes that supply chain risk undermines supply chain performance and supply chain collaboration reduces supply chain risks and empirically examines these relationships This study takes a supply chain perspective and examines risks from the supply side the internal production process and the demand side which compose a direct supply chain This is in line with a holistic and systems view of supply chain management Furthermore this study also attempts to understand the mechanism by which supply chain collaboration reduces supply chain risks This empirical study applied a mixed method with two phase research design In Phase One a survey research was conducted and quantitative data were collected from 203 manufacturing companies in Australia Structural equation modelling was used to test eight hypotheses about the relationships between supply chain risk supply chain performance and supply chain collaboration In Phase Two two in depth case studies were conducted in Australia and China and qualitative data were collected from six companies involved These include one Australian company manufacturing scientific instruments and two of its suppliers and one Australian provider of sport hardware and two of its suppliers Qualitative data analysis included cross case analysis and pattern matching to further improve and deepen the understanding of supply chain risks as well as supply chain collaboration as a risk mitigation strategy The results of this study indicate that supply chain risks undermine supply chain performance and supply chain collaboration reduces supply chain risks This study contributes to the literature through empirically verifying these relationships the relationship between supply chain risk and supply chain performance the relationship between supply chain collaboration and supply chain risk which have not been empirically investigated thoroughly in earlier studies This study also contributes to risk management in general and supply chain risk management in particular through clarifying the confusion in the extant literature and providing a better understanding of supply chain risk Furthermore this study contributes to the body of knowledge on supply chain risk management through fostering a supply chain perspective It investigates risks along a direct supply chain including supply risk process risk and demand risk as well as the interrelations between them The study also improves the understanding of a collaborative approach in risk mitigation through providing an explanation of the approach based on the relationship between information and uncertainty as well as the relational view The major theoretical contribution of this study is the application of the Theory of Swift Even Flow which is very limited in its application since it was proposed This study empirically tested the propositions of this theory through a survey study which is scant in the extant literature This study also provides insights to supply chain practitioners to manage supply chain risks with a systems approach and a holistic view

Supply Chain Collaboration. Status quo, Potenziale und Grenzen des Collaborative Planning, Forecasting and Replenishment Marie Wüst, 2020-04-20 Volatilität Komplexität Digitalisierung und Globalisierung prägen unsere Wirtschaft heutzutage in hohem Maße Auch auf Unternehmensebene wirken sie sich aus Viele

Unternehmen versuchen mit einem geeigneten Supply Chain Management die einzelnen Schnittstellen entlang der Wertschöpfungskette zu optimieren. So wollen sie die Bedürfnisse der Kunden auch in Zukunft befriedigen. Ein Mittel zur Bewältigung von Einflussfaktoren ist das Collaborative Planning Forecasting and Replenishment (CPFR). Doch wie weit ist dieses Modell in der Praxis schon? Hat es sich bereits etabliert? Und sind neben den zahlreichen Vorteilen auch Nachteile zu erwarten? Marie Westpritsentierte in ihrer Publikation den Status quo des CPFR. Grundlage für das Modell ist die Supply Chain Collaboration. Diese stellt zugleich die intensivste Form einer Kooperation dar. Marie Westpritsentierte die Funktionsweise des CPFR und untersucht, wie praxistauglich es tatsächlich ist. Dabei bezieht sie auch die Herausforderungen des 21. Jahrhunderts wie das sich verändernde Konsumentenverhalten sowie den digitalen Wandel ein. Aus dem Inhalt: VUCA, Efficient Consumer Response, Business to Business, B2B, Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP).

Supply Chain Collaboration Pairach Piboonrungraj, 2012 Purpose The aim of this thesis is to explore the dimensions of supply chain collaboration and examine its impact on firm performance and its mediating variables. Methodology A theoretical model was developed from a systematic review of relevant literature and theories. This was then revised by academics and practitioners. The model was empirically tested with survey data of 853 responses of tourism firms in Thailand using Structural Equation Modeling. Findings Results indicate that supply chain collaboration improves firm performance. This impact is mediated by trust, commitment, transaction costs and sustained competitive advantage. A multiple group analysis supports the research model across four groups; however, there are differences in the coefficients in some of the paths. In goods-based transactions, suppliers emphasise on collaboration to build relationships and to reduce transaction costs through developing commitment, while buyers focus on trust building. In the service-based transactions, service providers also tend to focus on trust as a key factor than service intermediaries who emphasise on developing commitment. Theoretical contribution This thesis synthesised six theories to explain how supply chain collaboration affects firm performance. The constructs of supply chain collaboration and transaction costs are also improved. Managerial insight The results inform managers about how different types of supply chain collaboration can improve the performance of their organisations. It also emphasises the different mechanisms, i.e. trust and commitment, in supply chain relationships between goods-based and service-based transactions.
