Each individual now lives in isolation below ground in a standard room with all bodily and spiritual needs met by the omnipotent global Machine. Travel is permitted but is unpopular and rarely necessary. Communication is made via a kind of instant messaging video conferencing machine with which people conduct their only activity: the sharing of ideas and what passes for knowledge. The two main characters, Vashti and her son Kuno, live on opposite sides of the world. Vashti is content with her life which like most inhabitants of the world she spends producing and endlessly discussing secondhand ideas. Kuno, however, is a sensualist and a rebel. He persuades a reluctant Vashti to endure the journey and the resultant unwelcome personal interaction to his room. There he tells her of his disenchantment with the sanitised mechanical world.
