Formalising employment is a desirable policy goal but how it is done matters greatly especially for women workers Indeed formalisation policies that do not recognise gendered realities and prevailing socio economic conditions may be less effective and even counterproductive This book examines the varying trajectories of formalisation and their impact on women workers in five developing countries in Asia and Africa India Thailand South Africa Ghana and Morocco They range from low to middle income countries which are integrated into global financial and goods markets to differing degrees and have varying labour market and macroeconomic conditions The case studies using macro and survey data as well as in depth analysis of particular sectors provide interesting and sometimes surprising insights Despite some limited successes in providing social protection benefits to some informal workers most formalisation policies have not really improved the working conditions of women workers In many cases that is because the policies are gender blind and insensitive to the specific needs of women workers The impact of formalisation policies on women in developing countries is relatively under researched This book provides new evidence that will be applicable across a wide range of developing country contexts and will be of interest to policymakers feminist economists and students of economics labour gender and development studies public policy politics and sociology Bibliography of Bioethics LeRoy Walters,1975 Bibliography of works which discuss the ethical aspects of physician patient relationship health care contraception abortion population reproductive technologies genetic intervention mental health therapies human experimentation artificial and transplanted organs are tissues death and dying and international dimensions of biology and medicine The Gardeners' Chronicle and Agricultural Gazette ,1854
