These results were all good, especially regarding the ability to measure the amount of water a plant needs when it is not in a container. The results were not as good when trying to determine the best way to water them. The students did not seem to understand the concept of soil moisture, and did not understand how to measure it. They also did not seem to understand the concept of soil salinity, and did not understand how to measure it. They also did not seem to understand the concept of soil texture, and did not understand how to measure it.
