Abstract. Contemporary strategic management of multinational corporations (MNCs) is a new trend in the development of MNC theory and practice. As an important part of the theory and practice of contemporary multinational corporations, the strategic management of multinational corporations reflects the changes and development trends of the contemporary world's economic structure, market structure, technological structure and so on in its own generation and development. Today, with the accelerated process of global integration and the deepening of economic globalisation, the strategic management of multinational corporations has become an important factor in the competitive advantage of contemporary enterprises and in their survival and development. As a new theoretical viewpoint, it is a scientific summary of the law of enterprise development and a useful supplement to the modern enterprise theory system.

Keywords: Transnational corporations, strategic management, importance.

1. Introduction

In today's globalized business environment, the importance of the strategic management of TNCs is becoming increasingly evident. With the development of science and technology and the expansion of markets, TNCs are faced with unprecedented opportunities and challenges. In this context, effective strategic management has become a key factor for TNCs to achieve competitive advantage and sustained growth. Strategic management of MNCs involves the formulation and implementation of strategies to adapt to market demands in different countries and regions, as well as the coordination and integration of the company's resources and operations on a global scale. Through sound strategic management, MNCs are better able to seize the opportunities of globalized competition, achieve market share growth, optimise resource allocation, reduce risk, and improve organizational flexibility and adaptability. Therefore, studying and exploring the importance of strategic management in contemporary TNCs is of great significance in understanding and responding to global business challenges.

2. The importance of strategic management in contemporary TNCs

Since the 1990s, the theory of enterprise management has undergone great changes, and the strategic management of multinational corporations is one of the important contents. Since the 1990s, the world economy and international trade pattern have undergone great changes, economic globalization has been further deepened, the economic development is increasingly presenting new characteristics, the rapid development of science and technology, the enterprise organizational structure and the management mode are constantly innovated, which all make the multinational corporations face unprecedented opportunities and challenges. TNCs are facing unprecedented opportunities and challenges [1]. In order to cope with the changes of the times and adapt to the needs of global competition, TNCs must reposition their business strategies and adjust their foreign investment strategies, organizational structures and management methods. The strategic management of transnational corporations is precisely to make their enterprises adapt to the changes in the world economy and international trade and arise and develop.
